RAIN RELIEVES PARCHED COUNTY

REPORT 2,000 CHINESE KILLED BY REDS

REFUGEES TELL OF MASSACRE OF MANY BY INVADING FORCE

Report 4,000 Missing; Woman Bayoneted By Soldier

LONDON, Aug. 6.—Refugees pouring into Shanghai charged that Communists slaughtered 2,000 Chinese after capturing Changsha, capital of Hunan province, according to today's dispatches to the London Times.

In addition, 4,000 government officials were declared missing, either kidnaped or executed.

Describing the Communist horde which swept in a ravagaing cloud over a large part of the Yangtse valley, the refugees and other sources estimated the strength of the Reds at 60,000 men, well equipped with government arms, ammunition and uniforms.

Meanwhile the Chinese Nationalist government issued a dispatch from Nanking affirming that Hunan provincial troops had re-entered Changsha. This could not be affirmed.

Official confirmation of the report that Communist bandits had chopped a finger from the hand of a British woman missionary had not yet been received by the British government, but the dispatch of warships to Hankow was sanctioned immediately as a precautionary measure.

Although recently two women missionaries reported being held for $50,000 ransom by Communists in northern Fukien province were announced released, it was considered probable here that earlier announcements were incorrect, the captives are Miss Edith Nettleton and Miss F. J. Harrison, of the British Church Missionary Society. The bandits have threatened to sever all their fingers unless ransom money is speedily received.

A new outrage against British Nationals included the serious bayoneting by a Chinese soldier of Mrs. A. R. J. Hearns at Puchen, north of Hankow.

Several foreign gunboats have concentrated in the disturbed area to protect their Nationals, who with thousands of Chinese are fleeing toward the river cities as the Communist horde advances.

PRESIDENT HOOVER DEMANDS SURVEY OF CROP DESTRUCTION

Executive Alarmed By Conditions Caused By Drought

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—President Hoover today took the lead in determining what action the federal government can take in averting what has been described to him as a possible national catastrophe because of the greatest nation-wide drought in history.

Alarmed by the numerous reports of crop destruction and lack of forage for cattle that have been constantly pouring into the White House, Mr. Hoover has notified the various agencies of the government, the department of agriculture in particular, to make an immediate survey of conditions and report to him by Monday.

Although it is believed the drought is reaching its crisis—that rain clouds are in the offing and rain will be plentiful for the remainder of the crop-growing season—the President wants to do everything within the power of the government to aid the stricken farmers and cattlemen.

Among the proposals Mr. Hoover is considering today are:

1.—A sharp reduction in freight rates on hay and feed into sections hard hit by the drought.

2.—Grant maximum credit facilities to farmers whose crops have been ruined.

3.—Low cost or perhaps free transportation of cattle from drought-swept areas to more favorable grazing lands.

The President's announcement followed the appearance at the White House of Louis J. Taber, master of the National Grange. He said he told Mr. Hoover that unless rain, and plenty of it, falls within ten days a national catastrophe will occur.

Taber gave the President a detailed picture of the plight of the farmers, the cattlemen and the dairymen; ther crops slowly deteriorating; their animals gradually weakening because of lack of grass and hay.

Secretary of Agriculture Hyde had his assistants at work today compiling reports on the true situation in the various areas; especially in the Middle West.

MILLIONAIRE'S SON KILLED WHEN PLANE FALLS AT CLEVELAND

"Playboy" Crushed To Death Evading Divorce Papers

CLEVELAND, Aug. 6. — The marital troubles of Joseph E. Kundtz, 30, son and heir of Theodore Kundtz, Cleveland multi - millionaire manufacturer, were at an end today, as friends and relatives mourned his death which occurred late yesterday when the airplane he was piloting crashed to the ground near Cleveland airport.

Kundtz was killed instantly. His attempt to leap to safety with his parachute was scarcely fifty feet from the ground, was futile.

A companion, Leonard Roof, 31, leaped from the plane which was soaring toward the ground in a tail spin, in his parachute and landed uninjured.

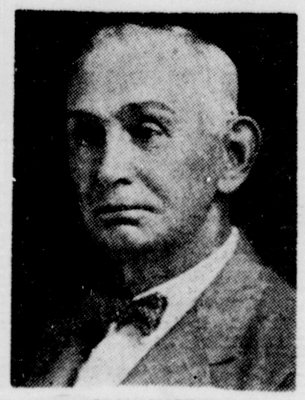

Kundtz, reputed "millionaire playboy," is said to have been flying about the state for the past two months to avoid process servers in a counter suit for divorce brought against him by his wife, the former Miss Gwendolyn Hancomb of Columbus, whom he married last Feb. 1. The petition filed by Mrs. Kundtz was a counter action against the divorce petition filed by Kundtz in Cuyahoga County courts just a few weeks after their marriage. Mrs. Kundtz' request for a temporary alimony of $250 a month had been granted by Common Pleas Judge Alvin J. Pearson.

The plane in which Kundtz and Roof took off from the Cleveland airport at 4 p. m., yesterday, was rented from the Cleveland Institute of Aviation. According to witnesses the plane flew toward the west and several minutes later it went into a tailspin. Roof, who gave an account of the mishap, said Kundtz had put the plane in the tail spin but was unable to regain control.

In an amendment of his original petition for divorce, Kundtz alleged that his four months of married life was a dirge that had as its theme: "money, money, money; pay, pay, pay." The petition also averred that the bride's parents had used "shakedown" tactics to compel Kundtz to meet demands.

Mrs. Kundtz, in her counter suit, charged cruelty and alleged that she had been subjected to physical violence.

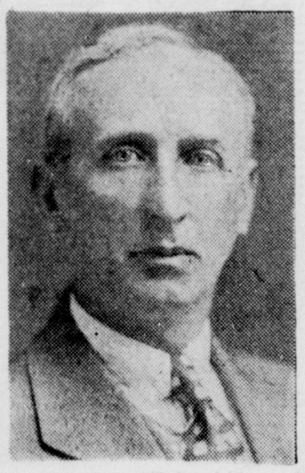

DIRECTING ANNUAL COUNTY FAIR

C. M. AUSTIN

J. R. BRYSON

B. U. BELL

Here are the officers of the Greene County Agricultural Society who are directing Greene County's ninety-first annual fair this year. Although board members divided the departmentalized work of the fair, these officers of the society are the directing geniuses behind the guns at the annual exposition. C. M. Austin, prominent Sugarcreek Twp. farmer, has had long experience as president of the fair board. J. Robert Bryson, of north of Xenia, as secretary of the board, has been busy for months preparing for the annual event. B. U. Bell, Xenia, deputy county auditor, is treasurer of the board and sees that "both ends meet."

IRREGULAR MARKET FEATURES OPENING

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Irregularity, with slightly lower prices for the speculative leaders, featured the stock market opening today.

The utilities were unsettled, with North American down a point at 100⅝; Public Service of N. J. down a point at 91¼; Consolidated Gas down ⅜ at 108½ and American and Foreign Power down at 119. Southern Railway was down ½ at 86½; New York Central down ½ at 165½; Western Maryland down ⅜ at 24 and Pennsylvania up ¼ at 75¼.

BAPTISTS CONVENE

GRANVILLE, O., Aug. 6.—Topics affecting the interests of Ohio Baptists are being discussed by members of the board of managers of the Ohio Baptist convention who are in session here today.

WILL ASK CONGRESS FOR AUTHORITY TO CONTROL PRIMARIES

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Constitutional amendment, giving congress the power to regulate primary elections in the states in the same manner it now controls general elections, will be introduced next fall, Senator Nye (R) of N. D., chairman of the campaign fund committee, announced today.

Nye declared developments at the current investigation into senatorial primaries revealed the need of a general governmental supervision. He was plainly gratified at the testimony given by Pennsylvania witnesses, at the resumed inquiry into the Davis-Grundy contest, that federal control of the primaries would be welcomed.

A long list of witnesses told the committee that senate inquiries, every other year, had brought improved conditions. One witness, Dean Hoffman, a Harrisburg editor, declared the knowledge that a "fearless senate" was watching had tended to curb corruption.

"One conclusion of all this testimony," said Nye, "is that corruption is being reduced. Another conclusion is that while corruption may continue it did not include the senatorial candidates in Pennsylvania to a large degree.

POLICEMAN KILLS BANDIT IN HOLDUP

DETROIT, Aug. 6.—One of two bandits who are believed to be responsible for ten recent hotel holdups here, was shot to death by a policeman today as he and his confederate fled from the State Hotel, where they had robbed a clerk. The slain man remains unidentified.

HELD BY POLICE IN ZUTA SLAYING

Betty Epperson, 27, left, and Marjorie Roberts, 22, both of Chicago, have been held by Milwaukee police in connection with the slaying of Jack Zuta, Chicago vice lord, who was shot down by gunmen as he placed nickels in a mechanical piano in a Wisconsin resort. A third girl was held with them. Police believe one of the trio knows who did the shooting.

DYNAMITE BOMB WRECKS HOME OF PROMINENT POLITICIAN

LORAIN, O., Aug. 6.—Explosion of a dynamite bomb today partially destroyed the residence here of Dave Buck, influential Republican politician, and shattered the windows of adjoining houses.

Mrs. Buck was alone in the house at the time of the explosion. She escaped uninjured except for shock.

The force of the dynamite charge ripped open one side of the Buck home. The blast sent a slight tremor through the city and sleeping neighbors were hurled from their beds.

Vandals who held an underworld grudge against Buck, were believed by police to be responsible for the explosion. Buck is claimed to have acquired the enmity of several alleged vice operators here in his political activities recently.

The bomb, according to police, had been set beside a cellar window at the residence. Police offered the theory that the full force of the explosion did not strike the wall directly but spread through the space in the cellar.

DROUGHT SHIFTS FOREST FIRE MENACE TO APPALACHIAN RANGE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—With great forests along the Applachian mountain range constantly threatened by fire as the drought continues, the United States Forest Service has established additional guards throughout the area and private conservation agencies today appealed to tourists and campers to use utmost care to avoid starting of fires.

The annual forest fire menace has been switched from the far West to the East as a result of the rainless season, officials said.

Already fires have occurred in several eastern states which have destroyed timber worth millions, and a hot, dry August may bring devastating conflagrations.

"The long drought has created a wholly abnormal fire hazard throughout the eastern Appalachian range in the national forests from Pennsylvania to the Carolinas and Arkansas," said E. E. Carter, acting chief U. S. forester.

"Forests in the southern Appalachian area at this season of the year usually are too green and too wet to burn, but now they are dry as tinder.

"There have been a few fires in the national forest areas, mostly from the outside. We stamped out a fire in West Virginia this week with a force of 200 men. Another fire the day before menaced a forest in the Alleghenies, and there have been one or two on government land in Virginia and the Carolinas.

"Lookouts in national forests, usually withdrawn at this time of the year, are being kept on because of the fire danger, and we have forces ready to fight fire.

"Our information is that while the season in the East is abnormal, the season in the forest areas of the far West is about normal."

Charles Lathrop Pack, president of the American Tree Association, urged people to exercise caution.

"Care can keep down the forest fire loss," he said. "The American people must exercise caution as never before.

"Yearly forest fires cost about a million dollars a day on the average even when we get rain to help the fire fighters. The situation is at a crisis right now."

Many state forestry departments in the East have issued new fire prevention warnings, according to information received by the tree association.

AGED WOMAN WRITER REMOVED BY DEATH

LAKE FREIGHTER SAILOR IS KILLED

CLEVELAND, Aug. 6. — Carl Ethang, 32, of Duluth, Minn., first mate on a lake freighter, was instantly killed today when he was caught in the teeth of an automatic unloading crane, which hoisted him fifty feet into the air and then dashed his body to a pile of ore.

BIGGEST FAIR EVER DECLARE WORKERS HERE

The "greatest show in Greene County" opened officially Wednesday with appropriate barnyard pomp and ceremony.

Wednesday was the annual birthday anniversary of the county fair and inaugurated a three-day celebration in honor of the fact the exposition was ninety-one years of age.

Keeping step with unprecedented progress recorded during the past years, the Greene County Agricultural Society will present for the public's approval the largest and best fair in its history.

Premiums amount to approximately $9,000, exceeding other years in this respect, and Secretary J. Robert Bryson pointed out enthusiastically that entries in the various exhibits are at least 20 per cent greater than in the last ten years, including 150 head of cattle, seventy show horses, 180 head of sheep, 175 hogs and 220 speed horses in the class and stake events.

The fair is not only a place to receive education but to obtain benefits from exhibiting products, wares, live stock and the like and many other things on which its welfare is dependent. It is the one week in the fifty-two when much valuable information is assembled heavily, however, Wednesday morning and in this respect history and will bring knowledge to the attendants that will add to their prosperity and happiness for years to come.

The 1930 fair is expected to surpass any fair of previous years by way of exhibits, amusement and recreation. There will be additional departments which will bring the fair up to date.

Thundershowers which brought to an end the long drought were hailed with delight by fairground officials late Tuesday because the rain laid the dust on the grounds and placed the track in good condition for the three-day racing program. The rain continued to fall repeated itself for it is inevitable that showers must interfere with the annual local fair.

Prospects were that unless the showers were of short duration the race track would be deep and holding and the opening day's card might have to be called off entirely.

Declaring that exhibits are one-third better filled than usual, Secretary Bryson said that farm products are being exhibited in abundance despite the unfavorable season.

The midway at the fairgrounds looked somewhat deserted Tuesday but all the concessions were not yet in place and there will be no lack of side shows, fair board officials promised.

BLAME TYPHOID ON DRINKING WATER

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 6.—A warning against drinking water along Ohio highways was issued by the state health department today to tourists, picnic parties and other persons.

This action was due to reports from county health officials showing a considerable increase in the number of typhoid fever cases.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 6.—Authorities here today were searching for a purse containing $125, valuable papers and letters of introduction, which was reported lost by Count DeTopar Lakopolanski of the Polish diplomatic corps at Washington.

NEW ORLEANS GIRL MISS UNIVERSE

"MISS UNIVERSE"

GALVESTON, Tex., Aug. 6.— A golden-haired New Orleans high school girl today held the title of "beauty queen of the universe." Miss Dorothy Dell Goff, 17, won the honor last night in competition with seven beauties representing foreign countries at the international beauty pageant here.

Miss Goff is five feet, six inches tall and weighs 123 pounds. Her hair is long. A cash award of $5,000 went to Miss Goff.

Miss Helen Hannan of New Jersey won first prize among the other contestants and received $1,000. Miss Gyorgyue Gero, Hungary, took second prize of $500. Other winner, ranked in the order named, each won $300::

Nadia De Kozarin, Russia; Iola Sibbrel, Lexington, Ky.; Greta Stockhold, Detroit; Lorana Rodionoff, New York; Pauline Scott, St. Mary's, Penn., Elsie Rossi, Brooklyn and Ruth Yoss, Pittsburgh.

Prizes will be presented to the winners tonight at a banquet concluding the international pageant of pulchritude.

RELEASE SUSPECT IN DEATH OF WOMAN

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 6.—Murel Smith, 42, was at liberty today after being subjected to an extended grilling by police relative to the death of his wife, Hazel, 36, whose body was found beneath her wrecked car, near Harrisburg, July 29.

"My conscience is clear. You haven't anything on me," Smith told police. Coroner James Murphy some days ago announced his decision that Mrs. Smith met an accidental death.

YACHTS COLLIDE WHILE KING LOOKS ON; SEAMAN DROWNED

COWES, ISLE OF WIGHT, Eng., Aug. 6.—Before the eyes of King George and other members of the royal family, two fast racing yachts collided today at the start of the Royal Squadron races here, resulting in the sinking of one of them and the loss of a member of its crew.

The yachts were the fifty-five-ton Lucilla, owned by J. Lauriston Lewis, and the other the big cutter Lulworth, property of A. A. Paton. Lucilla sank within three minutes after the crash. Her steward was drowned.

The accident occurred as the yachts were maneuvering for the start. His majesty and members of his family were aboard the royal yacht Britannia, which has been competing in the events with the king on board for the first time since his nearly fatal illness.

The yachts collided with a loud report, the Lucilla being stove in by the huge Lulworth below the water line. Quickaction by the crew of the Lulworth succeeded in saving all members of the crew except the steward.

GRASSHOPPERS ATTACK CORN CROPS IN INDIANA

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Aug. 6.—A horde of yellow grasshoppers said by eye-witnesses to number millions, was marching across parched cornfields of northern Vanderburgh and Posey Counties today to add to the havoc already wrought by this summer's unprecedented drouth.

The hoppers came out of some clover fields near Armstrong, about fourteen miles north of here. Clouds of the insects with whirring wings settled first on the farm of Henry Rieman where they devoured a sixteen acre corn crop.

From there the grasshoppers rose in clouds to attack a twelve-acre crop on the Albert Meinmar farm.

After destroying Meinmar's corn crop, the hoppers raided the field of Otto Scheller.

The grasshoppers came in such numbers that from 100 to 150 of them settled on each cornstalk according to Charles Raven, of St. Wendel, Ind., who led an unsuccessful drive to exterminate the invaders.

The hoppers gobbled up poison and corn alike and when there was nothing to eat, flew on, Raven said. Spraying also had no effect. Farmers who gathered to help in the fight against the pest were forced to stand idly by when all methods failed.

The grasshopper plague was moving from the east to the west and was entering Posey County this afternoon according to Raven.

GENERAL RAINFALL BENEFITS FARMERS AND TRUCK GARDENS

Telephone Service Impaired; More Showers Coming

Parched fields of Greene County took a new lease on life when a long overdue rainfall drenched Xenia and vicinity late Tuesday afternoon.

The long awaited moisture came like an eleventh hour reprieve to agriculturists between 4 and 5 o'clock and Xenians as well as farmers were jubilant that the prolonged drought and stifling heat spell may have been broken definitely at last.

The rainfall, general in the afternoon throughout the county, although comparatively light in the city, fell in especially large quantities in the northwestern part of the county.

It was estimated that the rain undoubtedly would benefit farmers in this vicinity to the extent of thousands of dollars although the drought has not been as severe in this county as other parts of the state where conditions were acute.

The rainstorm was accompanied by lightning and thunder and the total precipitation nearly equalled the entire previous month of July. The mercury dropped 20 degrees in an hour.

Telephone service in the north end of the city was again cut off Tuesday night and Wednesday because of a recurrence of trouble with a cable on N. Detroit St. which was struck by lightning recently. There were about twenty openings in the cable which had not yet been filled with lead, temporary repairs having been made by taping up the openings. It is believed that water may have penetrated the openings while the rainfall was at its height, resulting in a disruption of service. Service is expected to be restored by nighttall Wednesday.

Later investigation disclosed a branch of the cable on Union St. had been burned in two pieces, indicating that lightning may have again been responsible for most of the difficulty.

Early Wednesday lightning struck a cable pole of the Postal Telegraph and Cable Co., on N. Detroit St., between Market and Church Sts., burning off the wires. The incident supplied a display of pyrotechnics.

Tuesday's rain was not of short duration but continued intermittently all night and fell again Wednesday morning with renewed vigor, bringing relief from the sultry atmosphere.

It is not believed the moisture came too late to prove a boon to crops, which had been wilting and retarded for weeks. New life was also given pastures burned brown prematurely by the long period of dry weather.

The thundershowers were not confined to this section alone but were general over the state and further relief is seen in the forecast for more showers Wednesday and possibly Thursday with the temperature remaining about unchanged.

ENDURANCE FLYERS IN SIXTEENTH DAY

LAMBERT-ST. LOUIS FIELD, Aug. 6.—Dale "Red" Jackson and Forrest O'Brine piloting the endurance plane, "Greater St. Louis," completed their sixteenth day in the sky at 7:11 a. m. today. At that time ship and crew had been aloft 384 hours.

Jackson, through the ship's short-wave radio transmitter late yesterday, reported that he had contracted a cold and was "not feeling very well."

RETURN PRISONERS TO PENITENTIARY

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 6.—As a result of the return of forty prisoners from the Mansfield State Reformatory Tuesday, the population at Ohio Penitentiary today was 4,057. This is within 913 of equaling the state prison population prior to the holocaust last April.

Only 146 of the 363 prisoners who were transferred from the penitentiary to the Mansfield Reformatory after the tragic Easter Monday fire still remain in the Mansfield institution.

FOUR SEVERELY ILL FROM TAINTED MEAT

TOLEDO, O., Aug. 6.—Poisoning, due to meat eaten for lunch, is thought today to have caused the illness of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Rader, of Whitehouse, two of their sons and a daughter, all of whom were found unconscious in their home Tuesday.

The condition of Mr. and Mrs. Rader is deemed critical. The others are expected to recover.

JOE FINNEY SHOWS GOATS AT FAIR

"Swiss milk goats; immune to tuberculosis, Democratic panics and Hoover prosperity."

This sign calls attention to one of the most attractive and certainly the cutest exhibit at the Greene County Fair this year.

The proud owner of the exhibit is Attorney J. A. Finney, this city, former city solocitor, who in his leisure time is a goat fancier. He has eight head on display near the calf shed.

There is no class for goats at the fair but they are on display just the same, the attorney entertaining a secret hope that his pleadings with the fair board may be answered some time and a goat department added to the exposition.

The display includes two milk goats of the Swiss Toggenberg variety, one of which has three kids two weeks old.

Raising goats is Attorney Finney's pet hobby and he has been at it for the last ten years.

BELLBROOK

After an elapse of three years, Bellbrook and Waynesville, both of whom had met defeats and won victories on the once famous battle field, known as "The Wilderness," came together on the Waynesville diamond near the swimming pool last Sunday afternoon for the first of a series of three games. The tall giant form of Guy McMichaels, on the mound for the visitors, seemed to hold a sort of hypochondriacal spell over the homers who were held scoreless until the fifth inning, at which time an error on the part of an infielder, for the visitors allowed the first score. This was followed in the seventh by a succession of errors on the part of the visitors which swelled the home score to three. The home team scored one in the last half of the eighth inning, but fell down completely almost within reach of the goal when McMichaels turned loose in thunderbolt fashion with all the speed and new fangled curves at his command. The only home run scored was credited to Manager Zimmerman, who drove a long one into the race, scoring two ahead of him. Robert Edwards secured a two-bagger. Score: Bellbrook 6, Waynesville 4. The next game will be played on Magnetic Hill (home grounds) next Sunday, the game starting promptly at 3 o'clock.

OLD PICTURES SEEN

An interesting contrast between the Greene County Fair of today and the exposition as it was staged forty years ago is provided in pictures on display in the show window of the Commercial and Savings Bank, furnished by J. Paris Fashions Return To "Gay Nineties" For Ideas

By ALICE LANGELIER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

PARIS, Aug. 6.—Fashions for women reverted with a 40-year back jump to the styles of the "gay nineties" as the eagerly-awaited creations of the famous couturiers of Paris were displayed to hundreds of foreign buyers today.

"Leg o'mutton" sleeves, barrel muffs and abbreviated fur capes gave the fashion parades in the various ateliers the air of historical pageants. As in McKinley's time, milady of 1931 will be obliged to gather up her skirts and once again her dainty feet will be "like little mice" peeping in and out.

For many of the most favored creations have long, swirling skirts and long trains, presaging another possible "revolt" against the Parisian dictum by dress designers in other parts of the world who press for re-emancipation of women from the voluminous gowns of another era.

Redfern is specializing in "suspender" evening gowns, held up by flimsy gold and silver straps crossing at the back and attached to the shoulders, presaging a revival of "galluses" in smart company.

The majority of afternoon and evening gowns are excessively long, but sports and morning frocks are pretty much the same as last year. With new exhibitions opening tomorrow and Thursday, a number of sensational new departures are expected.

PUBLIC ADDRESS SYSTEM FOR FAIR

Greene County Fair patrons will hear all public announcements this year over a modern "Public Address System" which will prove a distinct advantage over the former method of making announcements through a megaphone.

The system will be used by the race starter in announcing the results of heats and will also be used by the race starter in announcing the results of heats and will also be used for the team pulling contest and other events. It consists of a sixteen-tube amplifying set connected with a microphone, and the human voice, increased in volume, will be focused through three powerful radio speakers arranged on top of the judge's stand, so that it can be heard over most of the Fair grounds.

The device, which was recently purchased by the Xenia Gazette for broadcast of news events, is installed by Harry Hagler, radio expert of near Xenia, and will be operated under his supervision.

NAME NEW MANAGER FOR BRANCH STORE

Announcement is being made of the appointment of Argus Swisher, formerly of Zanesville, as the new manager of the branch store of Cussins and Fearn Co., E. Second St., this city. He succeeds L. E. Smith, resigned.

Mr. Swisher was born and reared near Springfield and has had several years experience handling merchandise such as lumber, paints, hardware and farm materials before becoming connected with Cussins and Fearn, with which firm he has been connected a number of years. Before coming to Xenia Mr. Swisher was manager of the Cussins and Fearn Co., branch store in Zanesville for a year.

"HEIGH-HO, COME TO THE FAIR"
Writer Finds Many Interesting Things At County's Annual Exposition

By MILDRED MASON

"Heigh-ho come to the Fair!"

So, in the words of Helen Taylor, the composer, Greene Countians were bid to the ninety-first annual Greene County Fair, which opened inauspiciously Tuesday afternoon and will continue through Friday. The showers of Tuesday afternoon did not dampen the spirits of Greene County men and women but only tended to buoy them up as the rains have been needed for so long.

Very attractive, indeed, will the Fair seem to Greene County housewives this year, for unusually interesting displays have been arranged to catch their eye and suit their fancies. The Art Hall, the mecca for women, was bright with its array of fancy work, quilts, linens and hand-painted china. A color note was lacking here, however, for the large display of bright-colored blooms in the flower show was missing due to the drought and hot weather. Another interesting feature to be noticed in the Art Hall is that there is a larger area of space for the display of articles. Heretofore, the 4-H Club exhibits were shown here but this year they have been removed to the Grange Hall, thus allowing more room in the Art Hall.

Mrs. L. H. Jones, in charge of the Art Hall, says that this year there is a larger number of exhibitors and exhibits in this department than in any previous year, thus assuring one that an entire afternoon could be spent in this building alone. Music from radios, being displayed by Xenia merchants, creates a pleasant atmosphere, to add to the attractiveness.

The Grange Hall is another interesting building to visit while on the grounds. In addition to the exhibits of the various Greene County Granges the 4-H Clubs have arranged booths containing their displays, which show their talent and achievements during the year.

Another feature which should be of interest to the women is the dining hall. For years it was the custom for the women to work the day before preparing the dinner, frying chicken and baking cawe, for a picnic at the Fair, but the dining hall on the grounds, in charge of the women of the Friends Church at Jamestown, is serving meals thus saving Greene County wives all the extra labor and giving them more time to enjoy the Fair.

This year, the State Board of Health, assisted by local authorities, is showing a set of motion pictures and slides, concerning health problems. The display is under cover, with comfortable seats provided, and should be very well worth while.

Not only for the women, but there are the usual attractions arranged for the kiddies. The "balloon man" is there, barking his various wares of whips, balloons, whistles and balls. There is the ferris wheel and merry-go-round as usual, but the "merry mixup" and "whip" are missing. Then there is pink lemonade, cotton candy, sugar waffles, ice cream candy and other confections to satisfy that ever-increasing hunger which one always possesses when at the Fair.

The midway is lined with the always-present sideshows, games of chance and fortune-telling booths which hold their appeal to the country lad and lass.

Of course the races will attract many to the grandstand, but for those who do not care for this sport it is assured that one can spend an entertaining, as well as instructive afternoon at Greene County'c 1930 Fair.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

MY SIN—Why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brothers's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye? Or how wilt thou say to thy brother, Let me pull out the mote out of thine eye; and behold, a beam is in thine own eye? Thou hypocrite, first cast out the beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye.—Matthew 7:3.

VENUS OF MILO

Human nature of a sort has broken out again, this time in the little town of Winona Lake, Ind., home of the evangelist William A. Sunday, and favored as a summer resort by those who enjoy the religious assemblies which gather there. For 20 years a reproduction of the celebrated Venus of Milo has stood in the town. There it might have stayed without comment had not a summer visitor from Chicago seen fit to object. When the statue was recently removed to a location near the fire engine house, she caused poison ivy to be planted at its base, expressing the hope that in time the ivy would veil the "indecent figure." Winona Lake's firemen, seeing nothing prurient in the Venus, promptly uprooted the ivy by turning the fire hose on it. A civic controversy ensued. The chief of police defended the firemen by stating that Mr. Sunday had never objected to the presence of the Venus, and that "If it's O. K. with Billy, it's O. K. with me."

The original statue of the Venus of Milo, discovered on the island of Melos in the Aegean sea in 1820, has been in the Louvre in Paris since the reign of Louis Philippe, to whom it was presented by its purchaser, the French ambassador to Constantinople. As possibly the most priceless object in the Louvre, the Venus has a large room to herself. The body is nude to the waist, but from the hips downward soft draperies clothe its limbs. The delicate and graceful proportions of the statue have long been considered ideal. Altogether it is conceded to be a conception of chaste and noble intent executed by a sculptor of unquestioned technical skill.

It has remained for the matron at Winona Lake to bring a charge of indecency against this loveliness of line and form. We do not envy her this distinction, and can only trust that someone of the good people at Winona Lake will enlighten her, as Anatole France's Abbe Coignard spoke to M. Nicodeme, a fictional Anthony Comstock, who had fig leaves placed on all the statues in Paris. Instead of commending him, the wise Abbe declared that nothing could come of his action save the creation of a general state of mind which would induce Parisians who chanced upon any fig leaves in the course of their pastoral rambles to turn over the leaves to see what might be hidden beneath them.

THE ENDURANCE AGE

What kind of a champion are you? Have you displayed the endurance to become a flash-in-the-pan hero, heralded as king for a day, only to be forgotten before tomorrow's sunrise? Right now it happens to be tree-sitting that is the rage.

Add a new line of endeavor to those occupied by marathon dancers, flagpole sitters, fishermen, rocking-chair performers and outboard motor die-hards.

Back not so many years ago, 10-year-olds got their first experience in endurance contests on the business end of a hoe, at husking bees, in the potato patch gathering bugs or in the garden pulling weeds.

It's a safe bet that had any lad back in those dear, dead days tried to corner a sitting championship dad would have cured him for all time with a flailing hickory shingle in the woodhouse.

The WAY of the WORLD

CLOTHES AND PARADES

Preaching dress reform and wearing blouses, a number of men met in New York some days ago to start a crusade against coats and vests in hot weather. They had a luncheon and a parade. Both created little excitement. The average human doesn't care to be herded or paraded, and he will decide for himself what he wants to wear, all the way from galluses up or down. Speeches about dress reform are about as stimulating as speeches about spelling reform. We are organized up to the hilt now. One thing that has accounted for the rapid advancement of the American republic is the fact that so far we have known where to draw the line in allowing ourselves to be herded into a crusade—whether for setting up a communistic government or wearing pajamas on the street.

WORKING AT VACATIONS

Vacation is hard work for many. It is rather pathetic to see so many people running hither and thither, struggling so persistently to have a good time. They plan for weeks to spend a few days at a summer cottage where they end up by being just one-half as comfortable as they would at home. The wife, tired of cooking and washing dishes, long, hot trip, and arrives in a different place with fewer es and starts in to cook and wash dishes. Too many nned without the comfort of the wife in mind.

, there is something to be said for going away, for seek- change of place even at considerable discomfort. For the thing we most need in the way of vacation is a change of mind, a change of routine. It is not so easy to re-route the mind's activity and remain at home or in the shop.

IMPATIENCE

Nervous wrecks and dyspeptics come from the habit of impatience. We can't wait to get somewhere or do something. Often the whole matter we are excited about is trivial. W. J. Benedict, New York preacher, says:

"It takes courage and persistence. What we need today is more patient understanding. Patience is not merely standing by and waiting. It is power. It is like heat or electricity. It is real patience which get things done in the long run. Unhappiness and restlessness come from impatience."

THE HUMAN JAW

Today we have softer foods than our ancesters had. We chew less, swallow more easily. Thus the human jaw becomes smaller. It shrinks and is less powerful. On the other hand, the jaw gets more exercise of a different sort. We talk more.

WHAT WOMEN CAN DO

Marian McClench, president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, says too many women run tea rooms and not enough go in for the professions—law, medicine, etc. And women do not do so well in business because many go into it with too little experience.

How about leaving some of the women at home?

How should enamel woodwork be washed so as not to remove the gloss?

Enamel paint is dulled by soap. Such paint should be cleaned by rubbing first with a woolen or cotton flannel cloth wrung out of hot water, and then with a clean, dry cloth. Spots, stains, and dirt that will not yield to hot water alone may be removed with a fine scourer, but it must be applied lightly in order not the scratch the surface.

An Ugly Weapson

What kind of a weapon was the Roman gladius?

The gladius was generally a two-edged blade, rather broad and of nearly equal width from hilt to point. It was about two and one-half feet long.

Miniature Golf

What is the best material for making the fairways of a miniature golf course?

The best greens material for a miniature golf course, in the opinion of one expert, while quite expensive, is to make a good frame for the fairways and greens, cover this with tar paper, then put a layer of deadening felt one-half inch thick over the tar. Over this foundation a special rubber matting, that can be bought from one or two of the large rubber companies, is placed. The top of this mat is covered with green granulated rubber. A cheap greens material is cotton seed hulls dyed and mixed with red engine oil. This is put over a cinder base and rolled to a thickness of about an inch or two.

World's Longest Road

Where is the longest paved road in the world?

It is said to be U. S. Route No. 40, from Wilmington (Del.) to St. Mary's (Kas.), a distance of 1,254 miles.

The Best Ear

Do both ears record sounds with equal clearness?

The United States government, after testing the hearing of about 2,000 school children, found that the left ear was superior to the right in picking up sounds.

Fall's Conviction

What crime was Albert B. Fall accused of during his term of office?

On Oct. 25, 1929, Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior under Harding, was found guilty of accepting a bribe of $100,000 from Edward L. Doheny in the leasing of the Elk Hill naval oil reserve during the Harding administration. He was sentenced to a year in prison and a fine of $100,000, which he has appealed.

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.—Syl Sullivan, industrial economist and wizard of the "mike," was holding forth the other afternoon on "Silk Worms and Honey Bees."

In the course of his talk, by transition sweet, he slid to the object of home cooking, fresh eggs and things, and then he said:

"Where, in New York, can one procure DUMPLINGS—good, old-fashioned, palate-tickling, wholesome and alluring DUMPLINGS?"

If you are one of those benighted individuals who thinks that there are no ladies left in Manhattan who fuss around the old pot-and-pan garage, you ought to take a squint at some of Mr. Sullivan's next-day's mail.

He received at least fifty protests from outraged female DUMPLING architects and, as he says: "Only the Lord knows how many more there are who couldn't master their emotions, sufficiently, to write."

CLASS, PLUS

New York's outstanding Pearl Pavilion and Diamond Den is located on the Rue de la Quince—a stately granite pile that fairly oozes wealth and respectability. The clerks have all been there for years and years and years. You never in all your life saw such a bunch of eminently respectable men as those clerks. Even the detectives—"house dicks" they're called in other shops, but "detectives" in this particular place—exude the spirit of all that is forthright and conscientious in the law.

It's some dump!

A gentleman from the Middle Stratum entered this mausoleum the other day. He had a watch with a fractured main-spring. Would they repair it? They would. They did, and charged him $16 for so doing.

The gentleman from the Middle Stratum—who persipres, pays his debts and sits down and writes to the editor whenever he encounters injustice in life, following his usual bent, addressed a communication to the head of the Pearl Pavilion telling him that $16 for repairing the mainspring of a watch was an outrageous price and whatinell was he going to do about it?

The head of the firm wrote back and said: "How much do you think we should have charged you."

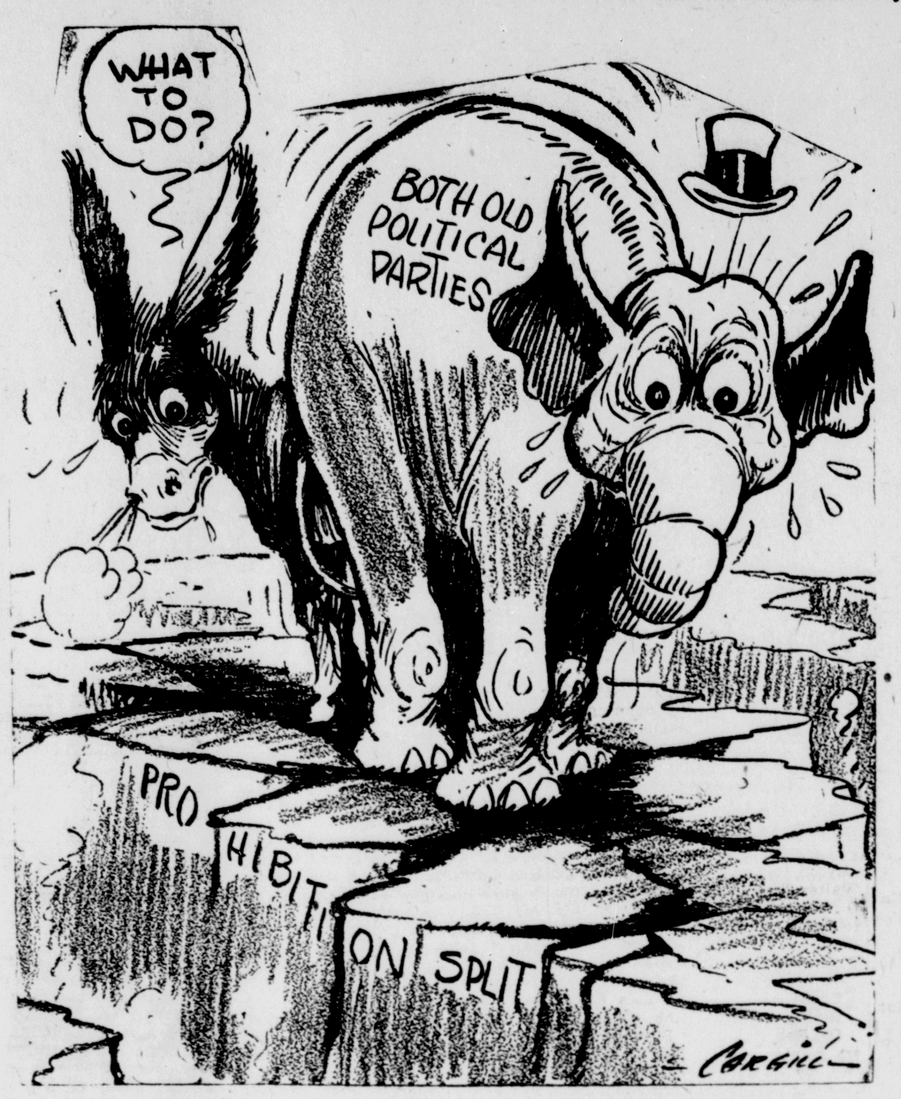

"Four dollars would have been a fair price," replied the man from the Middle Stratum.

The following day he received a check for $12.

The man is now walking round town telling everybody he meets about the transaction, not realizing that he is giving the concern thousands of dollars' worth of free publicity.

When they're too Respectable, look out. There's usually a trick in it somewhere.

SPEAKING OF EARTHQUAKE SUFFERERS

UNCLE SAM'S NEW CRUISERS WILL BE AIRCRAFT CARRIERS

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—America's new six-inch gun cruisers, under the London naval treaty, essentially will be small aircraft carriers—miniature Lexingtons and Saratogas—according to British experts, who describe them in a good deal of detail in English technical publications.

This may be one of the not infrequent cases in which the neighbors know more about our business than we ourselves know.

From what I hear at the navy department, Uncle Sam's constructors are still thinking over the problems raised by the London treaty. However, possibly some of them have talked tentatively with overseas specialists—fishing for others' ideas and trying to ascertain the latters' opinions concerning their own. Such chats do occur among fellow-craftsmen.

If the new vessels are to be "miniature Lexingtons and Saratogas" it is possible to visualize them pretty well, by examining either one of our big aircraft carriers through a diminishing glass.

Originally the Lexington and the Saratoga were to have been battle cruisers—a battle cruiser classing as a capital naval vessel, like a battleship, but faster, and, to permit of this greater speed, somewhat less heavily protected.

The Washington five-power treaty of 1921-'22 forced us to take them out of this category, however, and, as they were still under construction, both were altered to adapt them to aircraft carrying purposes.

To a landsman's eye, the most obvious change was the one shifting each vessel's funnels and entire superstructure from their time-honored position amidships to the extreme starboard, so as to leave the upper deck almost entirely clear for the taking off and landing of planes.

The ships proper (practically twin craft) are 850 feet long, with a 106-foot beam, but their flying decks have an overhang, fore and aft, which gives them an extreme length of 880 feet.

Their speed is between 33 and 35 knots, and, by bringing them up into the wind and plowing ahead under full steam a plane is enabled to take off with a run of rather less than 200 feet.

The complement of planes per ship is about 72, of which 36 are bombers.

Displacement—33,000 tons; huge vessels.

Cost—planes and all, about $45,000,000 each.

In congress, from some sources, there has been considerable complaint of the expense of the two carriers' upkeep, but naval men appear to be fairly well satisfied with them. It is true that they do require large staffs of officers and men. Also that, being pretty vulnerable, they need more than the average amount of protection in action. Nevertheless, they themselves provide a tolerable share of this protection with their own planes and batteries; besides which, being so fast, they are exceptionally capable of avoiding danger.

The American six-inch gun cruisers described in British accounts, are planned, as represented in these overseas versions, on about a 9,000-ton basis, of 33 knots speed, and designed, like the bigger carriers, with all their upper works exaggeratedly to starboard, leaving their decks clear, but of course with far less room for the maneuvering of planes than the larger vessels. It is true, if necessary planes can be catapulted. The relative smallness of deck space in one respect should be an advantage, as affording a more difficult target to enemy airmen.

One British authority speaks of as many as 75 planes contemplated as the complement per cruiser—a ridiculously large number, however. Such ships might, some American experts say, provide accommodations for as many as 20 planes; certainly not more than that.

(Two is the ordinary number for British craft of the eight-inch cruiser type, but these vessels, to be sure, are not designed especially for aircraft carrying.)

The American ships' batteries, as English naval writers publish the story, will consist of nine six-inch guns mounted in three turrets piled pyramidally at the starboard side of the flight deck of each vessel.

The cost per cruiser is estimated (by the British) at around $12,000,000.

Peter's Adventures

By Mrs. Florence Smith Vincent

ANT USES HER HEAD

So sleepy was Queen Ant that she drifted into Slumberland with her mouth wide open. She might have been a good-looking insect if it hadn't been for those sharp mandibles of hers. For some reason or other Peter couldn't take his eyes off the edged teeth on the outside of Queen Ant's head. Worker Ant noticed him staring, and knew the boy was curious.

"I can tell you a thing of two about those 'outside jaws,' as we Ants call them, that might surprise you," remarked Peter's friend. "If I am any mind reader I'll bet you're guessing we Ant's eat with our jaws like you do. Well, de don't, at least we don't eat with our 'outside jaws.' We fight with them, if you want to know the truth. We Ants have plenty of enemies who wish us ill, not only wish us ill, but set upon us. We'd be in a pretty fix if we didn't know how to repulse their atack. But when in pitch battle we meet an enemy face to face, we seize him by the throat and shake him to pieces."

Worker Ant looked so fierce that Peter backed away hastily. Worker Ant snickered.

"Come now, don't be afraid of me. I was talking of an enemy, not a friend. However, to continue if you think all we Ants use our mandibles for is to fight, you are badly mistaken. We dig with them, use them to saw 'lumber,' we cut up twigs and stems with them, too."

As suddenly as she had begun, Worker Ant stopped talking. Then Peter felt a tug at his sleeve. Worker Ant had it in her mouth.

"Come along with me!" mumbled Worker Ant. "We've wasted enough time in silly talk while Old Time is flying."

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

By MRS. MARY MORTON

MENU HINT

Stuffed Tomatoes
Creamed Potatoes
Buttered Beets Frozen Custard
Hot Tea with Lemon

This menu is one of those that are equally appetizing at luncheon or dinner at night. Plenty of fruits and vegetables and little meat should be the rule in every household during the hot weather.

TODAY'S RECIPES

Stuffed Tomatoes—Six firm tomatoes, one-half package soft cheese, one-half cup chopped celery, one-half cup chopped stuffed olives, one tablespoon chopped green pepper, one-fourth to one-half cup mayonnaise. Hollow out tomatoes, turn upside down to drain, chill. Cut cheese in tiny cubes and mix with the other ingredients, including the tomato pulp. Use enough mayonnaise to flavor well. Pack the tomatoes with the cheese mixture and chill in refrigerator, or, if you have an electric refrigerator, freeze for one hour in the refrigerator tray. Serve on shredded lettuce with more salad dressing if desired.

Frozen Custard — Four cups milk, two eggs, one-half cup sugar, one-half teaspoon salt, two cups light cream, one-half tablespoon vanilla. Scald milk. Beat eggs with sugar and salt. Pour a small amount of the scalded milk onto this, stirring constantly. As soon as it is well mixed, turn all back into double boiler and cook, stirring constantly until the custard coats the spoon. Remove from fire, add cream and cool. When sufficiently cold, add vanilla, pack in freezer, using eight parts ice to one of salt, let stand five minutes, then turn slowly at first until mixture starts to freeze, at which time increase the speed to give a whipping motion. When stiff, remove dasher, pack in additional ice and salt if needed, and let stand several hours before serving.

SUGGESTIONS

Fried Tomatoes

Slice two large, ripe tomatoes, dredge heavily with flour and fry brown in a generous amount of butter in a heavy frying pan. Fry tomatoes a very deep brown, as this gives them the desired flavor. When brown on both sides, cut or mash to a pulp with a spoon, then add one-half cup of cream—or one-half cup of milk and four tablespoons evaporated milk and salt and pepper. Stir constantly and cook until smooth. If sufficient flour has been used, no additional thickening need be added.

Take Child Early To Surgeon

By LULU HUNT PETERS, M. D.

"Is cleft-palate hereditary? Is this caused by a pre-natal accident, or is it just one of those inexplicable happenings? A."

It is believed that most cases of cleft-palate and hare-lip are congenital; that is, the condition arises after the child is conceived, A. (Hare-lip does not always accompany cleft-palate, and vice-versa.)

Both conditions are due to a failure of the development and union of the structures of the palate and lip. It is also true that they are inherited—that is, the tendency to this lack of development is passed on by the original germ cells of the father or the mother, or both. And this tendency is especially apt to be passed on through inheritance if these defects have occurred in both sides of the family.

It is believed by not a few superstitious individuals that these defects are caused by "markings" from maternal impressions, but we believe there is no scientific basis for markings from such a source. And certainly hare-lip and cleft-palate are not due to such markings, for these are known to develop as early as the sixth week of the life of the embryo—very often before the mother actually realizes she is with child.

The only treatment is surgical, and the best time to do the repair has not yet been settled. Many surgeons believe that the earlier it is done, the better.

"I have a maid who persists in leaving spoons in foods that are put away in the cupboards or ice box. Would it be poisonous to the system if the spoons were left in acid foods, jellies, pickles, etc.? Also, is it safe to leave cereals and other foods in aluminum dishes over night to reheat the next day in the same utensil? "MRS. L."

In any metal utensil there may be some slight erosion of the metal, caused by the acids and alkalies in the foods, if they remain long in them, Mrs. L., so it is best not to do this. (In cooking in such vessels, there is such a slight amount of erosion that it has no effect.)

I don't know of any research work that has been done to show just how much metallic element is released when spoons are left in acid foods, but the discoloration and bitter taste might be considerable, so it should not be done.

"I have a small lump on my back near the shoulder. My family doctor told me it is a fatty tumor and that I should not worry about it. It does not hurt, but itches frequently. I am 45 years old. What is your opinion? "MRS. S."

My opinion is that you should have it removed now, when the operation would be very slight, Mrs. S. Those tumors, while there is perhaps no danger of their degenerating to cancer, sometimes grow to enormous size, and they certainly are disfiguring and discomfiting.

White Lie May Be Embarrassing

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"Dare to be true; nothing can need a lie;
A fault which needs it most, grows two thereby."

If we could remember that quotation we wouldn't lie so light heartedly and industriously, would we? One little white lie doesn't seem so bad, but it sometimes brings very embarrassing results.

Of course there are lies that we all tell that seem, at least in this stage of civilization, necessary. Among these are the lie that you tell when you say your hostess' dinner is fine when it isn't—or that you have had a nice time at her party when you were bored to death. Those unpleasant truths that even as a "best friend" you can't tell without incurring everlasting hatred.

But, generally speaking, it certainly is the "best policy" to tell the truth. A young girl writes me she is embarrassed "to tears." I expect, although she doesn't use just that expression, by some silly little untruths she told a young man. Now she doesn't know how to set herself right in his eyes.

"Dear Virginia Lee: I have written to you before so I am not a newcomer to your wonderful department. I am so worried! Several months ago I met a boy whom I thought I would never see again, so I told several lies which I now regret very much.

"I am just 16, so when he asked my age I said 17—18 in November, because he is 19, and 16 sounds so young. I quit school last Christmas, but I told him I was to graduate in December.

"What made me tell these lies I don't know, because really, Virginia, I am not a liar. I went back to where I first met him and kept going back until now I realize I love him and I think he likes me quite well, too.

"Just recently he asked me again when I was to graduate, and I told him at Christmas. I just didn't have the nerve to confess I quit school. What am I to do? I swear I'll never tell another lie to a boy because a girl never knows but what he isn't the ONE boy. Be truthful to the boy friends, girls!

"Please help me, Virginia.

"ARDISS."

Nothing to do but 'fess up, sister And break yourself right away of the habit of lying, not only to boy friends, but to anyone. It will get you into a lot of messes and it's a terrible habit to get into. Personally, I detest a person whose word I can't trust.

George Jr., comes to bat again with the following very nice letter, which, in justice to him, as we have all been panning him, I shall print.

"Dear Miss Lee: I just returned from a nice trip east, and, of course, the first thing I looked up was your column. And I guess I was getting panned.

As for Joan, more power to her, if she is sincere. But I'd like to meet her without her knowing who I was. I'd soon find out. Sounds like I think a lot of myself, doesn't it? But I don't. It's just all in the game.

"Perhaps Joan is right, but it seems to me if you (I mean us boys) don't neck any girl we might be with, they sure give us the horse laugh. And what I mean, dates become mighty scarce to any boy who won't or don't do more or less necking.

"And show me a girl who won't or hasn't done her share of necking and I'll do my best to 'corral' her for life. I thank you.

"GEORGE, JR."

Beet Juice Makes Good Face Rouge

By GLADYS GLAD

While walking through a department store recently, I was attracted to a cosmetics table where a woman was demonstrating with liquid rouge. The crowd around her was enormous, and no wonder! She was applying a portion of the liquid rouge to her cheeks to show its effectiveness, and then drinking the remainder!

This, of course, was to demonstrate that the rouge was pure and a harmless compound. It would be wonderful if all our cosmetics were as harmless as this particular rouge, although none of us contemplate making a breakfast or luncheon of our cosmetics.

However, there was really nothing new about the demonstration. The probability is that the rouge was nothing more than beet juice. And anyone in the world who has any qualms about the manufactured product can press the juice from a beet and have an excellent rouge. Farm women have used beet juice for rouge for ages. And many of them will probably continue to use it, as innumerable women continue to use cucumbers for bleaches, and plain bread dough for face masks.

It will surprise many of my readers to know that the juices of fruits and vegetables are the bases of many cosmetics, and are oftentimes the sole coloring agents.

In the matter of beet juice for rouge, it isn't possible to obtain any shade from it but a beet juice shade. And it is in the refining of color, in the blending of it with other colors, that the manufacturers have improved upon the primitive methods of obtaining this cosmetic.

We all know the value of lemons, salt, tomato, beet and cucumber juices as beauty aids. One manufacturer of cold cream uses honey in her product—the one food in the world that is sure energy, and never deteriorates. No matter how we may improve upon Nature's products in the beauty field, however, we cannot get very far from them as basic elements.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

Weight

Sally: Your standard weight is about 110 pounds. Near-sightedness can be cured if the condition is treated by a reliable oculist.

Eyelashes

C. M., Jeannette, Sally, E. Konoz and A. L. G.: Any good brand of plain white or yellow vaseline, or plain castor oil applied to the eyelashes and eyebrows will promote their growth, and make them long and heavy. Olive oil is not as effective. Castor oil will not fatten the eyelids.

Develop Bust

Florence C.: Yes, cocoa butter will help to develop the bust. Warm the cocoa butter, and massage it into the bust with an upward stroke. Lemon juice is an excellent bleach for the hands.

EDITOR'S NOTE: While it is impossible for Miss Glad to answer beauty questions by mail she will be happy to send you her pamphlets on "The New Figure" and "Beauty Culture" if you will write her care of this paper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope and 10 cents in coin, for each to cover cost of printing and mailing. Personal questions on beauty will be answered through Miss Glad's daily column.

SPORT SNAP SHOTS

FRAMED by Phil

Paul "Pop" Boxwell, one of the most outstanding all-around, athletes ever developed at Xenia Central High School, has placed his John Hancock on the dotted line of a one-year contract to coach athletics at the high school at Delta, O., located about twenty miles west of Toledo, during the 1930-31 school year.

Boxie will teach mathematics and will coach football, basketball and possibly track. The Delta high school has an enrollment of about 250 students and faces a stiff nine-game schedule on the gridiron this fall, Boxie says.

The fall term will not open until September 8 but Boxie will leave Xenia August 30 in order to take the football candidates on a week's outing to Sand Lake around Lake Michigan.

"Pop" graduated from Xenia Central High in 1922 after starring in basketball and football for four years. He attended Ohio State University for two years and finished his higher education at Wilmington College, graduating this year. At Wilmington Boxie gained quite a reputation as a defensive fullback and also played basketball to some extent.

During the last four summers he has been pitching in softball games in Xenia and last year was the leading hitter of the National League. He is affiliated with Geyers this season and while not leading the batsmen is nevertheless in the .400 class and is just about the most dangerous batter in the league.

Walter Winchell had the right idea when he said "take it from Mrs. Winchell's little boy Walter, we found out a long time ago that a good gag was worth a bust on the jaw." He added: "And we're warning you just as we warned Edgar Selwyn, the producer, who told the town that he was going to slap our face—you may want to slap our face but you'll have to take your turn in line." If our body is ever found in Shawnee Creek, question Hy Hyman for the following reason. We went on record with the statement that it was Sam Huston who was playing the No. 11 pipe hole on the Henrie Bros course the other night when a ball he had hit in the pipe failed to emerge on the green. Investigation disclosed a huge toad was blocking the passage. It seems that it was not Sam at all but was other than Isadore who was the principal in this little incident. Mistakes will happen, and often do in the best regulated columns.

John Hurley has pitched his last game of ball this season for the Lang Chevrolets, prospective champions of the National Softball League. Bill Baxley says he understands that Hurley is to enroll at Bliss Business College at Columbus next week for a course lasting fourteen months, more or less.

The early days of softball in Xenia were recalled to mind Monday night when Company L forfeited its game with Ki-Ro and the boys chose up sides for a game. The big "kick" came when "Tiny" Smith knocked a home run and pranced around the bases in a manner reminiscent of the time the Senior Business Men had a softball team with Wilker Gibney, Joe Gable and others in the lineup.

The regular infield of the Cincinnati Reds does pretty well considering the fact each player is playing out of his accustomed position. Jersey Joe Stripp at first base is a third baseman, recently converted to take George Kelly's place; Horace Ford at second was heretofore always found at shortstop; Durocher at short is more at home although he had been playing second most of the time since joining the Reds; Tony Cuccinello at third is more accustomed to second base.

RAIN PREVENTS SOFTBALL GAME

For the second time this season a sudden rainstorm prevented the Downtown Country Club and Graham Paints softball teams from getting together Tuesday night to play a National League game which, after all, was probably of small importance to either team inasmuch as nothing in particular hinged on the outcome.

Under an agreement reached at the beginning of the season this game will probably never be played off this summer unless it is discovered that the result of the contest would have an important bearing on the league race, which is unlikely.

MERCHANTS TO PLAY LINCOLN CUBS HERE

Xenia Merchants will play a return game with the Lincoln Cubs, of Dayton, instead of the Dayton White Sox next Sunday afternoon at Washington Park, Manager Jess Chambliss explains that the three-game series with the White Sox will not be played on successive Sundays and that that colored team will not appear here again until August 24. Sunday after next the Merchants will oppose the Jamestown Independents in a game that will have all the aspects of a struggle for diamond supremacy in Greene County.

BOWERSVILLE WINS FROM SHILOH TEAM SUNDAY AFTERNOON

Bowersville Independents whipped the Shiloh baseball team, 11 to 3 Sunday afternoon to register its eleventh victory in fifteen games this season, and next Sunday will visit Lynchburg to play a game with the team of that place.

Changes in the Bowersville lineup were noticed Sunday, the shifts being made in the interest of strengthening the team. Several new players took part in the contest and older players were transferred to other positions.

R. Hargrave, shortstop, had a perfect day at the plate with three singles and a triple in four times up. His three-baseblow came at an opportune time in the fifth stanza with the bases loaded. Kite obtained three safeties for Shiloh. Box score:

No. 11—The Straight Sideline Shot

The straight sideline shot is one of the most effective shots in tennis. Both forehand and backhand strokes must be developed to the same degree of get even balance. The backhand straight sideline shot is the harder of the two to execute, so take greater care with it.

Realize that in playing the sideline shot you are covering always the shorter distance of flight. Practice returning your opponent's cross-court shot with a straight shot.

One of the most secure defenses consists of playing every ball down the sideline as this keeps up your court to score. The straight sideline shot is your greatest weapon for stopping a net rusher.

When your adversary rushes to the net disregard him and concentrate placing your shot directly down the sideline, but hit it carefully and not too hard, otherwise your errors on this shot will be many. When playing a series of straight shots, do not play a cross-court shot unless you are prepared for your opponent's counter return to your uncovered area. PRACTICE PLAYING A DEEP STRAIGHT SHOT and following it to the net to kill the return which most times WILL BE CROSS-COURT.

Next: Service.

REPORTS HEARD AT ROTARY MEETING

Reports of the conference of presidents and secretaries of the twenty-second district of Rotary were heard when members of the Xenia Rotary Club held their weekly luncheon meeting at the Elks' Club Tuesday noon. Since it was the first meeting this month a short business session was held at which Louis Hammerle, president, presided.

Mr. Hammerle and Purl E. Cox, who represented the Xenia club at the conference held last week, each gave reports of the meeting. "Doc" Williams, secretary of the Lebanon Rotary Club was a guest at Tuesday's luncheon and he delivered a short address in which he described one session of the Middletown conference.

Farm Notes

SPRAY POTATOES WEEKLY DURING HOT WEATHER

Potatoes must be sprayed at least once a week during hot weather to get a satisfactory yield. The intense rays of the sun during midsummer are injurious to potatoes, and at the same time hopperburn becomes very serious. A heavy coat of Bordeaux spray serves as a shade and protects the leaves to some extent from the sun. Bordeaux is also the best preventive known for the hopperburn disease.

Experiments by Paul E. Tilford, associate in Botany and Plant Pathology at the Ohio Experiment Station, on the shading effect of Bordeaux mixture have shown that the whiter the coating of spray the greater the cooling effect on the internal tissue of the leaf. For this reason it is advisable to add extra lime to the spray during midsummer. Bordeaux made according to a 4-7-50 formula rather than the usual 4-6-50 whitens the leaves considerably.

The hopperburn disease is caused by an insect known as the leafhopper. The leaf tips and edges first turn yellow and then brown. Hot, dry weather hastens the development of the disease. Bordeaux acts both as a poison and as a repellant to the leafhopper.

Both heat injury and hopperburn are usually most serious about the time the late potato plants begin to set tubers. From this time on, or at least until the arrival of cooler weather in September, a spray should be applied every week.

HISTORY OF LIBRARY SHOWN HERE IN EXHIBIT OF INSTITUTES AT FAIR

The exhibit of the Greene County District Library at the Greene County Fair this year is a history of the library and shows the various steps in the formation of the institution. It dates back to the time when the library was first located on Green St., its removal to the present building on E. Church St., and down to the last few years when the Greene County District Library was organized with its sub-stations located in all parts of the county.

During the years of its location on Green St., the library suffered many financial difficulties and when in 1904 Andrew Carnegie made possible the present structure on E. Church St., it seemed that its troubles were at an end. The corner-stone of the new building was laid in 1904 and on that particular day a group of Xenia women, who had spent much time and effort in trying to make the library possible, gathered together for the occasion. Those in the group were Mrs. Sarah Harbine, Mrs. Lestra Kinney Kenyon, Mrs. Elizabeth Flynn, Mrs. Belle McDowell Patterson, Mrs. Louie Allison, Miss Belle Gatch, Miss Isadora King and Miss Etta McElwain.

Even after the removal of the library to its present location financial difficulties were encountered and to increase its funds the library tried in the following twenty years every form of organization, including a free library under the board of education, a county library under the county commissioners and finally the district library, which is serving the county at present.

During the last three years the circulation at the library has nearly tripled and now the library is able to serve all parts of the county where a number of years ago it was only possible to reach a few patrons. A resume of its growth is occupying a place of prominence at the Fair, it is announced.

TO GIVE PROGRAM

An interesting program of music, consisting of quartet arrangements, solo numbers, instrumental novelties and other features will be presented by members of the male quartet of Muskingum College, New Concord, O., at the First United Presbyterian Church, E. Market St., Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. A silver offering will be taken at the program.

Members of the quartet are: Roy Haynes, Hanover, O., first tenor; Robert Smith, Aliquippa, Pa., second tenor, John Galloway, Akron, baritone; Frank Neff, St. Clairsville, O., bass; and Howard White, Youngstown, O., pianist. The quartet is traveling by motor and is touring Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York and other states in the interest of the college.

The public is cordially invited to the program which is assured to be entertaining and well worthwhile.

LANGS WILL TANGLE WITH DAYTON TEAM

The Lang Chevrolet Co. softball team, leader of the Xenia National League, will help out in the celebration of "Booster Day" at the North Side ball field in Dayton Wednesday afternoon, meeting the Shroyer and Sons softball nine at 2 o'clock in the preliminary event on the program.

The softball game will be followed by a series of field events and at 3:15 o'clock the Dayton Aviators, with a record of four straight victories over the Forty Wayne Chiefs, returned to their home lot to face Springfield in a Central League game.

Rivalry between Langs and Shroyers has been keen this season and as the two teams are about evenly matched a corking good game may be expected. This game will be the first on the program.

AUDITOR CRESWELL IS GIVEN APPROVAL FOR ELECTION HERE

PAUL H. CRESWELL

Greene County voters at the August primary will have the opportunity of expressing approval of the candidacy of Auditor Paul H. Creswell, to appear before the electorate at the November election to succeed himself as county auditor. Mr. Creswell never sought elective office before this present contest. He was appointed to his office as auditor because of the elevation of former Auditor Ralph Wead to his present position as deputy state auditor.

Trained for a decade under the careful and able auditorship of Ralph Wead, Mr. Creswell has a most thorough-going knowledge of the duties of this highly important office. Mr. Wead's recognition in being named deputy state auditor was to some extent the result of Mr. Creswell's faithful service as the deputy under Mr. Wead. The conduct of the Greene County auditor's office is regarded over the state as second to none.

Most of the people of Bath Township will have a warm spot in their hearts for Auditor Creswell because of the special service he rendered a few months ago in very materially reducing the tax rate. This was done without impairing either maintenance or improvement requirements, though not without a great deal of inconvenience to the auditor's office. This spirit of willingness to serve his constituency is an outstanding characteristic of Mr. Creswell, a characteristic that should entitle his candidacy for nomination to the most careful consideration of all.

Audtor Creswell is one of the most active American Legion men in Greene County. Having seen many months of service overseas, he thoroughly appreciates the purpose and general spirit of the Legion organization, and has materially assisted it in various phases of its program.

In being appointed a member of Governor Cooper's tax commission, Mr. Creswell was given the distinction of being one of the two county auditors in the entire state to have a place on this important commission. With the re-arranging of our state tax laws that is sure to come next year as a result of the classification amendment being passed, it should be an advantage to Greene County to have its auditor one of the members of the state tax committee.

In every respect it would seem that the auditor's office would be well manned during the next four years should the present incumbent be returned.

SPLASH! She Swims to Conquer

By Eleanore Burnett

Copyright, 1930, by Central Press Association, Inc.

READ THIS FIRST:

Kitty-Wilmot, super stenographer, crack swimmer, leaves her home on the death of her fatner to take a position in New York to live her own life and be "free." She makes a new circle of friends largely among those with whom she works. Atlee Wainright, chief clerk to her employer, Ellery Goss, Wall Street king, is very attentive and she likes him. Sally Ayers, head bookkeeper, she learns to love and admire. She meets Gordon Platt, Goss' confidential man, and is strongly attracted to him, but has already been warned that he is a gamber and a roue; Wainright hates him.

Put under his orders by Goss, she learns that there is an information leak in the offices, which must be stopped; she becomes in a way a private detective to help Platt find the leak. She meets him, unknown to the rest of the office, goes to dinner, for a ride, to the theater with him. Kitty is sure of her judgments; she is "always right." Convinced that Platt is what he has been said to be, she finds him deliciously, dangerously pleasant to be with.

Platt leaves for a two weeks' trip; on the night he goes she is surprised into making a very pleasant speech to him, and goes to bed with flaming cheeks and in fear of herself that she is on the way to like the wrong man too much.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER 11

Much was to happen in the two weeks Platt was away. In the morning Kitty received a letter from John Spurgeon, inclosing a check for eight hundred dollars, the settlement of her father's small estate.

"I wanted to bring this to you, but I cannot affard it," he wrote. "Mother must go to Rochester for an expensive operation. I must find three thousand dollars; I don't know where, but it won't be by taking a trip to New York to see you."

When she deposited the check, Kitty asked her balance. "With this it is nine hundred and thirty dollars," she was told. Kitty nodded. The fund with which she had begun had been stolen, but she had saved a little from her very good salary. Impulsively she wrote her check for nine hundred dollars and sent it to John.

"You won't want to take it, but you must!" she wrote. "You can pay it back when you are ready. I have a good job and don't need the money. I will send you a hundred dollars a month as long as you need it. I can well afford it and I love your mother. You must take it for her, John, dear." She was glad John didn't know it was all she had!

Kitty was very happy over this; it always pleased her to do something for a friend, and she felt much better that she could repay the lawyer for his kindness at the time of her father's death. But she had little time that day to think of her act, Mr. Goss kept her very busy, and was unusually sardonic and difficult.

During the day she had two invitations; one was from Atlee for dinner and a visit to a night club; the other from Hilda, who asked her to a party on the following Saturday. "Don't tell any one, will you? It's not our office crowd!" The blond 'phone girl was very mysterious. "You'll meet Spike!"

Kitty did not care much about going to Hilda's; Sally's warning was not the reason, but she preferred Saturday evening at the Ayers. But she was too generous to spoil the pleasure of the hard-boiled and slangy receptionist, who seemed to regard it as very important that Kitty meet her Spike, the policeman about whom she had heard so much.

Atlee called for her early, at six, and drove her first to a quiet house in the seventies.

"Where are we going?" asked Kitty, as he paid off the taxi.

"Little girls musn't ask questions!" he smiled. "Won't you trust me?"

Kitty said no more. Of course she would trust Atlee!

The quiet house proved to be one of those unobstrusive foreign restaurants, inhabiting a made over private house, in which New York abounds. Kitty was ushered into an upstairs private dining room; a beautifully decorated table drew an exclamation of pleasure from her.

For the first time in her life Kitty tasted Chateau Yquem with her fish, and Mumm's with her dinner.

In Atlee Kitty discovered a new man at a dinner table. Thus far, while his eyes had been warm, and the swift kiss which had served as such a sudden introduction that first evening in the taxi had been hot, he had been rather diffident with her; now he was bold, gay, carefree, ardent.

11

Atlee crushed her to him.

Atlee talked interestingly and ceaselessly; she liked what he said, but more the way he said it. Kitty hardly believed he was serious, his expression and his tones both made of her nothing less than a queen.

From dinner he took her to the night club, and Kitty saw for the first time New York's night life as it is.

They danced often. With each dance, Atlee held her closer. Her dinner gown of peach chiffon, with transparent velvet wrap, slippers and hose matching the dress, and a chancel necklace and bracelet, represented an extravagance she would not have committed had John's letter come earlier; she had bought it to be seen with Platt, but—one must be well dressed on one's first appearance at a night club! She had been a little doubtful over its fit; Kitty protested to the saleswoman that it was almost too tight.

"Tres bien!" responded the sales girl. "Madamoiselle has ze right to wear it so!"

And Kitty had blushed and taken it. Now she did not care; it was a more modest gown than a dozen around her, and Atlee's arm pressing her tightly to him seemed to spell approval—

"Come on, let's get out of this!" he said thickly, after a two-encore dance. "I've something to show you—"

The taxi stopped before a tall apartment house in upper Park Avenue. Through dizzy eyes Kitty noted a quiet rich lobby, a uniformed hall porter and elevator boy, a swift and noiseless ascent to the eighth floor.

"Where—are we?" whispered Kitty.

"Friends of mine. Mr. and Mrs. Killiher. Be here presently; come in."

A grave faced butler opened a heavy door and ushered Kitty into such an apartment as she had never dreamed existed. It seemed to have endless vistas and halls and rooms. The heaviest of oriental and Chinese rugs covered the floors. Furniture which even to Kitty's unpracticed eye spelled antiquity and pricelessness was to be seen in profusion. Kitty had a confused impression of much gold; gold ceiling, gold colored curtains, gold chairs. A huge gold and brown divan stood back of a black and gold fireplace, in which a golden blaze crackled merrily. A black and white dressed maid took her wrap; the butler brought in a tray with glasses.

"Mr and Mrs. Killiher say when they'd be here, Henderson? If they call, put them through here. That will be all, thank you—"

"Where's the 'phone?" asked Kitty. Atlee pointed to a gold and green inlaid cabinet.

"What a wonderful place!" cried Kitty, sitting on a couch. "Who are these people, Atlee? They must have oodles of money! I've never heard you speak of them to Sally—"

"No. And don't you. No need to tell all you know. But I wanted them to meet you—you darling!"

Kitty smiled at him. He was very handsome. The room was hushed and beautiful. Kitty had never felt such a warm glow of happiness! How good he was to her—this evening must have cost him a lot of money—

"Atlee! I'm all conscience struck! You can't afford to spend money on me like a—like a—"

"Like a drunken sailor?" suggested Atlee. "Why can't I?"

"Because—well, Mr. Goss pays good salareis, but you've shot a week's pay on this evening, at least!" protested Kitty.

Atlee smiled. "I am not wholly dependent on my pay!" he answered. "Don't worry, girlie!"

"But I can't repay you—I have no home to invite you to—"

"Feel the debt heavy on your heart?" he asked, sitting closer. "If you do—"

"Oh, I do!"

He slipped an arm around her. "I stole one once!" he whispered. "Now give me one—"

Kitty stirred restlessly in his arms; she started to protest. But the lights were very bright, the surroundings beautiful. Atlee was—sweet.

She turned towards him, the dimple much in evidence.

Atlee crushed her to him. He rained kisses on her cheeks, her dimple; his lips clung to her lips. For a moment the world went around.

"Don't—don't!" she cried.

"Don't? But I will!" he answered. "I've got you, now! You are mine, you darling, mine, do you hear? I'll never let you go—never, never—"

Kitty stared up into his eyes; eyes no longer clear and cold, the eyes of gentlemen. Now they were predatory, burning. Something in them seared a message that frightened her. She sprang up, hastily; terror in her heart.

Atlee, too, sprang to his feet. His arms were stretched out to take her when the curtains parted and the butler came in.

"You are wanted on the 'phone, sir!" he said respectfully.

The butler disappeared. Atlee picked up the 'phone and turned his back. As if all the devils in hell were after her, Kitty fled from the room, crashed open and shut the heavy door and fled down the stairs marked "exit" without her wrap, thoroughly frightened for the second time in her life.

The Theater

Gloria Swanson, the Cinderella of motion pictures who began as a Mack Sennett bathing beauty and woke up as one of the leading emotional actresses of the screen, has lost her marquis.

Without mentioning divorce, Gloria and the Marquis De La Falaise admit their paths have parted. De La Falaise came from Europe early this week for the announced purpose of conferring with Miss Swanson regarding the future. The Marquis registered at a hotel in Hollywood and Gloria continued to reside at her Malibu Beach home.

"We have lived apart for more than a year," said Gloria," and we have decided to continue doing so, although we remain the best of friends. Henri and I have found it convenient to maintain separate establishments."

The French nobleman frankly admitted that difficulties of maintaining their separate careers had interfered with the perfection of his marriage with the screen star, but, he said, no "open break" had occurred.

Meanwhile Hollywood speculated as to the future course of the interesting couple. Miss Swanson made a trip to Europe following her successful re-entry into pictures as a talkie artist, but De La Falaise then was in Sweden on a business trip in connection with his work as representative of a Hollywood film producer.

While Paris couturiers are displaying gowns that sweep the floor for the fall, Hollywood disagrees with the dictum that dresses must be longer. Most sport and business dresses and suit shirts are going to stop two to four inches below the knees, so that the leg and even the knee will remain visible in scenes on and off the screen.

The Hollywood studio fashion creators concede evening dresses will remain long, but not so long as last winter. The newest note for the fall is the long evening coat and wrap, some very long, very close-fitting and occasionally sleeveless. Legs will tell the time of day.

Beginning with what milady wears in the morning her hemline will creep floorward as the sun creeps westward. After the sun has disappeared, so with all vestige of legs. One new style, known as the "allure skirt", will form a sort of twilight, half way between daylight and dark. This gown will be long enough to conform to the evening mode when the wearer is standing and when she sinks into a chair, two slits along the sides of the skirt will open, revealing behind panels of fine black net, considerable of the feminine leg.

Ann Harding says her afternoon gowns will be ankle and her evening gowns floor length. Helen Twelvetrees decrees ankle length skirts only for afternoon. Constance Bennett's evening gowns will sweep the floor. Irene Del Roy's afternoon gowns will be twelve inches from the floor and Laura Lee will wear suits ten inches from the floor. Marilyn Miller wants her evening gowns one inch from the floor. And so on.

Modern Artists' Models Must Be Intelligent

"Beautiful But Dumb" Girls No Longer in Demand—Popular Posers Make Good Salaries.

BETTY JOHNSON GUIRLE ANDRE.

By ALICE ALDEN

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Beauty has become something more than a cult. It has become a profession and to the girl who realizes the assets of her beauty, charm and innate grace it offers a new field of achievement and success. The artist model is not what she used to be, or what she is supposed to have been—a good-looking girl who had nothing more to do than to look beautiful and stand still for hours and hours.

Today the artist model relies as much on her brain as on her charm and charms. And that is why the ranks of successful models contain several college girls, daughters of professional men and even society girls, all of them young and charming, all of them full of eager enthusiasm over their chosen profession. For modeling has become a profession, as one can learn from any famous commercial artist or photographer.

Leaders of Profession.

The charming young lady attired as a beautiful bride in the traditional white satin and cloud of tulle, the smart young debbie in a delectable beach ensemble, the cooly efficient secretary seated at a business-like desk wearing the latest office clothes or demonstrating the points of an office device—all these attractive pictures are posed by the girls who are leaders in their chosen profession.

An dthen again the illustrations that accompany the stories in periodicals and magazines, the same charming girls model for these too, and do their best to make the story even more interesting and intriguing than it is. Talk with some of the famous artists who are topnotchers in the field of magazine story illustrating and they will one and all tell you how much they owe to their models, and how much these same models help them in creating the correct atmosphere in the picture that helps tell the story.

The girls who are most in demand by photographers and artists live exceedipgly busy lives.

Their days are mapped with the precision usually associated with a busy executive. They dash from one sitting to another sustained by a hastily eaten sandwich, snatched in between appointments or eaten in a taxi while en route to a studio.

Their salaries? Quite startling when measured by even modern standards of adequate comepnsation. For the model who is constantly in demand makes anywhere from $100 to $200 a week, and very often receives dresses and accessories to boot. For the photographic sitting the compensation is at the rate of $10 per hour, and for a sitting to an illustrator, $5 for an hour's work. For work it is, despite so much sitting around and just looking nice or sad or cruel or fashionable. For that is where the brains come in.

Any artist will tell you that a good model will instantly suggest the picture he has in mind, or the situation he has been commissioned to depict. Her grace and intelligence both function in creating the correct pose and expression, and sometimes the model will even suggest a better idea for the illustration in hand.

Some of the Best

The highest paid models in the profession today are Betty Johnson, who poses for the girl of the "society" type; Joan Clemens—much in demand by photographers; Peggy Fish, a good-clothes type; Guirle Andre, very blonde and statuesque; Marian Moorehouse, a most aristocratic type, and Winifred Strickland, who instantly suggest a cut and fashionable "debbie." Many girls who are very much of society are also earning extra "pin money" by posing for photographers. One of these is Miss Hannah Lee Sherman, who is listed in the New York Social Register. She portrays, of course, the society girl as a bride, in evening clothes and other lovely raiment. It is said that her mother was at first opposed to her daughter, a scion of an aristocratic old family, doing this work. But after accompanying her daughter and seeing how interesting the work it, and how businesslike its methods and activities, it is said that she not only gave permission for her daughter to continue the work, but that she herself helps to arrange the appointments and schedules. Thus has the once-despised profession of modelling entered the ranks of society and created new standards of beauty combined with brains.

They Pay You

ADVERTISEMENTS pay you to read them. They pay you in time. From the advertisements in this newspaper you can learn where to get what you want, instead of searching around. You can know the merits of each article offered for sale.

They pay you in money. Advertisements help you to get full value for your dollars. Goods which are consistently advertised are of consistently high quality for their prices.

They pay you in satisfaction. Manufacturers and merchants will not undertake an advertising campaign until they are sure their product is right. It would be ruinous to advertise an unworthy product, for that would simply call added attention to its deficiencies.

They pay you in information. Advertisements tell of new products, of new designs, new materials, better workmanship. Well-informed people always read the advertisements to keep posted.

REPORT 2,000 CHINESE KILLED BY REDS

REFUGEES TELL OF MASSACRE OF MANY BY INVADING FORCE

Report 4,000 Missing; Woman Bayoneted By Soldier

LONDON, Aug. 6.—Refugees pouring into Shanghai charged that Communists slaughtered 2,000 Chinese after capturing Changsha, capital of Hunan province, according to today's dispatches to the London Times.

In addition, 4,000 government officials were declared missing, either kidnaped or executed.

Describing the Communist horde which swept in a ravagaing cloud over a large part of the Yangtse valley, the refugees and other sources estimated the strength of the Reds at 60,000 men, well equipped with government arms, ammunition and uniforms.

Meanwhile the Chinese Nationalist government issued a dispatch from Nanking affirming that Hunan provincial troops had re-entered Changsha. This could not be affirmed.

Official confirmation of the report that Communist bandits had chopped a finger from the hand of a British woman missionary had not yet been received by the British government, but the dispatch of warships to Hankow was sanctioned immediately as a precautionary measure.

Although recently two women missionaries reported being held for $50,000 ransom by Communists in northern Fukien province were announced released, it was considered probable here that earlier announcements were incorrect. The captives are Miss Edith Nettleton and Miss F. J. Harrison, of the British Church Missionary Society. The bandits have threatened to sever all their fingers unless ransom money is speedily received.

A new outrage against British Nationals included the serious bayoneting by a Chinese soldier of Mrs. A. R. J. Hearns at Puchen, north of Hankow.

Several foreign gunboats have concentrated in the disturbed area to protect their Nationals, who with thousands of Chinese are fleeing toward the river cities as the Communist horde advances.

PRESIDENT HOOVER DEMANDS SURVEY OF CROP DESTRUCTION

Executive Alarmed By Conditions Caused By Drought

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—President Hoover today took the lead in determining what action the federal government can take in averting what has been described to him as a possible national catastrophe because of the greatest nation-wide drought in history.

Alarmed by the numerous reports of crop destruction and lack of forage for cattle that have been constantly pouring into the White House, Mr. Hoover has notified the various agencies of the government, the department of agriculture in particular, to make an immediate survey of conditions and report to him by Monday.

Although it is believed the drought is reaching its crisis—that rain clouds are in the offing and rain will be plentiful for the remainder of the crop-growing season—the President wants to do everything within the power of the government to aid the stricken farmers and cattlemen.

Among the proposals Mr. Hoover is considering today are:

1.—A sharp reduction in freight rates on hay and feed into sections hard hit by the drought.

2.—Grant maximum credit facilities to farmers whose crops have been ruined.

3.—Low cost or perhaps free transportation of cattle from drought-swept areas to more favorable grazing lands.

The President's announcement followed the appearance at the White House of Louis J. Taber, master of the National Grange. He said he told Mr. Hoover that unless rain, and plenty of it, falls within ten days a national catastrophe will occur.

Taber gave the President a detailed picture of the plight of the farmers, the cattlemen and the dairymen; ther crops slowly deteriorating; their animals gradually weakening because of lack of grass and hay.

Secretary of Agriculture Hyde had his assistants at work today compiling reports on the true situation in the various areas; especially in the Middle West.

MILLIONAIRE'S SON KILLED WHEN PLANE FALLS AT CLEVELAND

"Playboy" Crushed To Death Evading Divorce Papers

CLEVELAND, Aug. 6. — The marital troubles of Joseph E. Kundtz, 30, son and heir of Theodore Kundtz, Cleveland multi - millionaire manufacturer, were at an end today, as friends and relatives mourned his death which occurred late yesterday when the airplane he was piloting crashed to the ground near Cleveland airport.

Kundtz was killed instantly. His attempt to leap to safety with his parachute was scarcely fifty feet from the ground, was futile.

A companion, Leonard Roof, 31, leaped from the plane which was soaring toward the ground in a tail spin, in his parachute and landed uninjured.

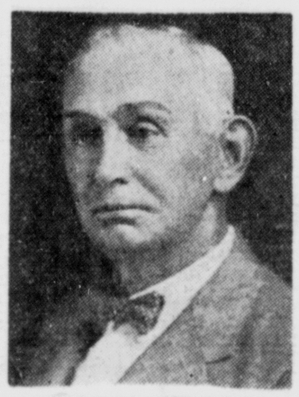

Kundtz, reputed "millionaire playboy," is said to have been flying about the state for the past two months to avoid process servers in a counter suit for divorce brought against him by his wife, the former Miss Gwendolyn Hocomb of Columbus, whom he married last Feb. 1. The petition filed by Mrs. Kundtz was a counter action against the divorce petition filed by Kundtz in Cuyahoga County courts just a few weeks after their marriage. Mrs. Kundtz' request for a temporary alimony of $250 a month had been granted by Common Pleas Judge Alvin J. Pearson.

The plane in which Kundtz and Roof took off from the Cleveland airport at 4 p. m., yesterday, was rented from the Cleveland Institute of Aviation. According to witnesses the plane flew toward the west and several minutes later it went into a tailspin. Roof, who gave an account of the mishap, said Kundtz had put the plane in the tail spin but was unable to regain control.

In an amendment of his original petition for divorce, Kundtz alleged that his four months of married life was a dirge that had as its theme: "money, money, money; pay, pay, pay." The petition also averred that the bride's parents had used "shakedown" tactics to compel Kundtz to meet demands.

Mrs. Kundtz, in her counter suit, charged cruelty and alleged that she had been subjected to physical violence.

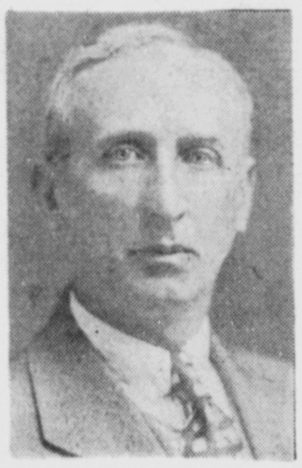

DIRECTING ANNUAL COUNTY FAIR

C. M. AUSTIN

J. R. BRYSON

B. U. BELL

Here are the officers of the Greene County Agricultural Society who are directing Greene County's ninety-first annual fair this year. Although board members divided the departmentalized work of the fair, these officers of the society are the directing geniuses behind the guns at the annual exposition. C. M. Austin, prominent Sugarcreek Twp. farmer, has had long experience as president of the fair board. J. Robert Bryson, of north of Xenia, as secretary of the board, has been busy for months preparing for the annual event. B. U. Bell, Xenia, deputy county auditor, is treasurer of the board and sees that "both ends meet."

IRREGULAR MARKET FEATURES OPENING

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Irregularity, with slightly lower prices for the speculative leaders, featured the stock market opening today.

The utilities were unsettled, with North American down a point at 100⅝; Public Service of N. J. down a point at 91¼; Consolidated Gas down ⅜ at 108½ and American and Foreign Power down at 119. Southern Railway was down ½ at 86½; New York Central down ⅛ at 165½; Western Maryland down ⅜ at 24 and Pennsylvania up ¼ at 75¼.

BAPTISTS CONVENE

GRANVILLE, O., Aug. 6.—Topics affecting the interests of Ohio Baptists are being discussed by members of the board of managers of the Ohio Baptist convention who are in session here today.

WILL ASK CONGRESS FOR AUTHORITY TO CONTROL PRIMARIES

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Constitutional amendment, giving congress the power to regulate primary elections in the states in the same manner it now controls general elections, will be introduced next fall, Senator Nye (R) of N. D., chairman of the campaign fund committee, announced today.

Nye declared developments at the current investigation into senatorial primaries revealed the need of a general governmental supervision. He was plainly gratified at the testimony given by Pennsylvania witnesses, at the resumed inquiry into the Davis-Grundy contest, that federal control of the primaries would be welcomed.

A long list of witnesses told the committee that senate inquiries, every other year, had brought improved conditions. One witness, Dean Hoffman, a Harrisburg editor, declared the knowledge that a "fearless senate" was watching had tended to curb corruption.

"One conclusion of all this testimony," said Nye, "is that corruption is being reduced. Another conclusion is that while corruption may continue it did not include the senatorial candidates in Pennsylvania to a large degree.

POLICEMAN KILLS BANDIT IN HOLDUP

DETROIT, Aug. 6.—One of two bandits who are believed to be responsible for ten recent hotel holdups here, was shot to death by a policeman today as he and his confederate fled from the State Hotel, where they had robbed a clerk. The slain man remains unidentified.

HELD BY POLICE IN ZUTA SLAYING

Betty Epperson, 27, left, and Marjorie Roberts, 22, both of Chicago, have been held by Milwaukee police in connection with the slaying of Jack Zuta, Chicago vice lord, who was shot down by gunmen as he placed nickels in a mechanical piano in a Wisconsin resort. A third girl was held with them. Police believe one of the trio knows who did the shooting.

DYNAMITE BOMB WRECKS HOME OF PROMINENT POLITICIAN

LORAIN, O., Aug. 6.—Explosion of a dynamite bomb today partially destroyed the residence here of Dave Buck, influential Republican politician, and shattered the windows of adjoining houses.

Mrs. Buck was alone in the house at the time of the explosion. She escaped uninjured except for shock.

The force of the dynamite charge ripped open one side of the Buck home. The blast sent a slight tremor through the city and sleeping neighbors were hurled from their beds.

Vandals who held an underworld grudge against Buck, were believed by police to be responsible for the explosion. Buck is claimed to have acquired the enmity of several alleged vice operators here in his political activities recently.

The bomb, according to police, had been set beside a cellar window at the residence. Police offered the theory that the full force of the explosion did not strike the wall directly but spread through the space in the cellar.

DROUGHT SHIFTS FOREST FIRE MENACE TO APPALACHIAN RANGE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—With great forests along the Applachian mountain range constantly threatened by fire as the drought continues, the United States Forest Service has established additional guards throughout the area and private conservation agencies today appealed to tourists and campers to use utmost care to avoid starting of fires.

The annual forest fire menace has been switched from the far West to the East as a result of the rainless season, officials said.

Already fires have occurred in several eastern states which have destroyed timber worth millions, and a hot, dry August may bring devastating conflagrations.

"The long drought has created a wholly abnormal fire hazard throughout the eastern Appalachian range in the national forests from Pennsylvania to the Carolinas and Arkansas," said E. E. Carter, acting chief U. S. forester.

"Forests in the southern Appalachian area at this season of the year usually are too green and too wet to burn, but now they are dry as tinder.

"There have been a few fires in the national forest areas, mostly from the outside. We stamped out a fire in West Virginia this week with a force of 200 men. Another fire the day before menaced a forest in the Alleghenies, and there have been one or two on government land in Virginia and the Carolinas.

"Lookouts in national forests, usually withdrawn at this time of the year, are being kept on because of the fire danger, and we have forces ready to fight fire.

"Our information is that while the season in the East is abnormal, the season in the forest areas of the far West is about normal."

Charles Lathrop Pack, president of the American Tree Association, urged people to exercise caution.

"Care can keep down the forest fire loss," he said. "The American people must exercise caution as never before.

"Yearly forest fires cost about a million dollars a day on the average even when we get rain to help the fire fighters. The situation is at a crisis right now."

Many state forestry departments in the East have issued new fire prevention warnings, according to information received by the tree association.

AGED WOMAN WRITER REMOVED BY DEATH

LAKE FREIGHTER SAILOR IS KILLED

CLEVELAND, Aug. 6. — Carl Ethang, 32, of Duluth, Minn., first mate on a lake freighter, was instantly killed today when he was caught in the teeth of an automatic unloading crane, which hoisted him fifty feet into the air and then dashed his body to a pile of ore.

BIGGEST FAIR EVER DECLARE WORKERS HERE

The "greatest show in Greene County" opened officially Wednesday with appropriate barnyard pomp and ceremony.

Wednesday was the annual birthday anniversary of the county fair and inaugurated a three-day celebration in honor of the fact the exposition was ninety-one years of age.

Keeping step with unprecedented progress recorded during the past years, the Greene County Agricultural Society will present for the public's approval the largest and best fair in its history.

Premiums amount to approximately $9,000, exceeding other years in this respect, and Secretary J. Robert Bryson pointed out enthusiastically that entries in the various exhibits are at least 20 per cent greater than in the last ten years, including 150 head of cattle, seventy show horses, 180 head of sheep, 175 hogs and 220 speed horses in the class and stake events.

The fair is not only a place to receive education but to obtain benefits from exhibiting products, wares, live stock and the like and many other things on which its welfare is dependent. It is the one week in the fifty-two when much valuable information is assembled heavily, however, Wednesday morning and in this respect history and will bring knowledge to the attendants that will add to their prosperity and happiness for years to come.

The 1930 fair is expected to surpass any fair of previous years by way of exhibits, amusement and recreation. There will be additional departments which will bring the fair up to date.

Thundershowers which brought to an end the long drought were hailed with delight by fairground officials late Tuesday because the rain laid the dust on the grounds and placed the track in good condition for the three-day racing program. The rain continued to fall repeated itself for it is inevitable that showers must interfere with the annual local fair.

Prospects were that unless the showers were of short duration the race track would be deep and holding and the opening day's card might have to be called off entirely.

Declaring that exhibits are one-third better filled than usual, Secretary Bryson said that farm products are being exhibited in abundance despite the unfavorable season.

The midway at the fairgrounds looked somewhat deserted Tuesday but all the concessions were not yet in place and there will be no lack of side shows, fair board officials promised.

BLAME TYPHOID ON DRINKING WATER

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 6.—A warning against drinking water along Ohio highways was issued by the state health department today to tourists, picnic parties and other persons.

This action was due to reports from county health officials showing a considerable increase in the number of typhoid fever cases.

POLICE HELP COUNT SEARCH FOR PURSE

CLEVELAND, Aug. 6.—Authorities here today were searching for a purse containing $125, valuable papers and letters of introduction, which was reported lost by Count DeTopar Lakopolanski of the Polish diplomatic corps at Washington.

NEW ORLEANS GIRL MISS UNIVERSE

"MISS UNIVERSE"

GALVESTON, Tex., Aug. 6.— A golden-haired New Orleans high school girl today held the title of "beauty queen of the universe."

Miss Dorothy Dell Goff, 17, won the honor last night in competition with seven beauties representing foreign countries at the international beauty pageant here.

Miss Goff is five feet, six inches tall and weighs 123 pounds. Her hair is long. A cash award of $5,000 went to Miss Goff.

Miss Helen Hannan of New Jersey won first prize among the other contestants and received $1,000. Miss Gyorgyue Gero, Hungary, took second prize of $500. Other winner, ranked in the order named, each won $300::

Nadia De Kozarin, Russia; Iola Sibbrel, Lexington, Ky.; Greta Stockhold, Detroit; Lorana Rodionoff, New York; Pauline Scott, St. Mary's, Penn., Elsie Rossi, Brooklyn and Ruth Yoss, Pittsburgh.

Prizes will be presented to the winners tonight at a banquet concluding the international pageant of pulchritude.

RELEASE SUSPECT IN DEATH OF WOMAN

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 6.—Murel Smith, 42, was at liberty today after being subjected to an extended grilling by police relative to the death of his wife, Hazel, 36, whose body was found beneath her wrecked car, near Harrisburg, July 29.

"My conscience is clear. You haven't anything on me," Smith told police. Coroner James Murphy some days ago announced his decision that Mrs. Smith met an accidental death.

YACHTS COLLIDE WHILE KING LOOKS ON; SEAMAN DROWNED

COWES, ISLE OF WIGHT, Eng., Aug. 6.—Before the eyes of King George and other members of the royal family, two fast racing yachts collided today at the start of the Royal Squadron races here, resulting in the sinking of one of them and the loss of a member of its crew.

The yachts were the fifty-five-ton Lucilla, owned by J. Lauriston Lewis, and the other the big cutter Lulworth, property of A. A. Paton. Lucilla sank within three minutes after the crash. Her steward was drowned.

The accident occurred as the yachts were maneuvering for the start. His majesty and members of his family were aboard the royal yacht Britannia, which has been competing in the events with the king on board for the first time since his nearly fatal illness.

The yachts collided with a loud report, the Lucilla being stove in by the huge Lulworth below the water line. Quickaction by the crew of the Lulworth succeeded in saving all members of the crew except the steward.

GRASSHOPPERS ATTACK CORN CROPS IN INDIANA

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Aug. 6.—A horde of yellow grasshoppers said by eye-witnesses to number millions, was marching across parched cornfields of northern Vanderburgh and Posey Counties today to add to the havoc already wrought by this summer's unprecedented drouth.

The hoppers came out of some clover fields near Armstrong, about fourteen miles north of here. Clouds of the insects with whirring wings settled first on the farm of Henry Rieman where they devoured a sixteen acre corn crop.

From there the grasshoppers rose in clouds to attack a twelve-acre crop on the Albert Meinmar farm.

After destroying Meinmar's corn crop, the hoppers raided the field of Otto Scheller.

The grasshoppers came in such numbers that from 100 to 150 of them settled on each cornstalk according to Charles Raven, of St. Wendel, Ind., who led an unsuccessful drive to exterminate the invaders.

The hoppers gobbled up poison and corn alike and when there was nothing to eat, flew on, Raven said. Spraying also had no effect. Farmers who gathered to help in the fight against the pest were forced to stand idly by when all methods failed.

The grasshopper plague was moving from the east to the west and was entering Posey County this afternoon according to Raven.

GENERAL RAINFALL BENEFITS FARMERS AND TRUCK GARDENS

Telephone Service Impaired; More Showers Coming

Parched fields of Greene County took a new lease on life when a long overdue rainfall drenched Xenia and vicinity late Tuesday afternoon.

The long awaited moisture came like an eleventh hour reprieve to agriculturists between 4 and 5 o'clock and Xenians as well as farmers were jubilant that the prolonged drought and stifling heat spell may have been broken definitely at last.

The rainfall, general in the afternoon throughout the county, although comparatively light in the city, fell in especially large quantities in the northwestern part of the county.

It was estimated that the rain undoubtedly would benefit farmers in this vicinity to the extent of thousands of dollars although the drought has not been as severe in this county as other parts of the state where conditions were acute.

The rainstorm was accompanied by lightning and thunder and the total precipitation nearly equalled the entire previous month of July. The mercury dropped 20 degrees in an hour.

Telephone service in the north end of the city was again cut off Tuesday night and Wednesday because of a recurrence of trouble with a cable on N. Detroit St. which was struck by lightning recently. There were about twenty openings in the cable which had not yet been filled with lead, temporary repairs having been made by taping up the openings. It is believed that water may have penetrated the openings while the rainfall was at its height, resulting in a disruption of service. Service is expected to be restored by nightfall Wednesday.

Later investigation disclosed a branch of the cable on Union St. had been burned in two pieces, indicating that lightning may have again been responsible for most of the difficulty.

Early Wednesday lightning struck a cable pole of the Postal Telegraph and Cable Co., on N. Detroit St., between Market and Church Sts., burning off the wires. The incident supplied a display of pyrotechnics.

Tuesday's rain was not of short duration but continued intermittently all night and fell again Wednesday morning with renewed vigor, bringing relief from the sultry atmosphere.

It is not believed the moisture came too late to prove a boon to crops, which had been wilting and retarded for weeks. New life was also given pastures burned brown prematurely by the long period of dry weather.

The thundershowers were not confined to this section alone but were general over the state and further relief is seen in the forecast for more showers Wednesday and possibly Thursday with the temperature remaining about unchanged.

ENDURANCE FLYERS IN SIXTEENTH DAY

LAMBERT-ST. LOUIS FIELD, Aug. 6.—Dale "Red" Jackson and Forrest O'Brine piloting the endurance plane, "Greater St. Louis," completed their sixteenth day in the sky at 7:11 a. m. today. At that time ship and crew had been aloft 384 hours.

Jackson, through the ship's short-wave radio transmitter late yesterday, reported that he had contracted a cold and was "not feeling very well."

RETURN PRISONERS TO PENITENTIARY

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 6.—As a result of the return of forty prisoners from the Mansfield State Reformatory Tuesday, the population at Ohio Penitentiary today was 4,057. This is within 913 of equaling the state prison population prior to the holocaust last April.

Only 146 of the 363 prisoners who were transferred from the penitentiary to the Mansfield Reformatory after the tragic Easter Monday fire still remain in the Mansfield institution.

FOUR SEVERELY ILL FROM TAINTED MEAT

TOLEDO, O., Aug. 6.—Poisoning, due to meat eaten for lunch, is thought today to have caused the illness of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Rader, of Whitehouse, two of their sons and a daughter, all of whom were found unconscious in their home Tuesday.

The condition of Mr. and Mrs. Rader is deemed critical. The others are expected to recover.

JOE FINNEY SHOWS GOATS AT FAIR

"Swiss milk goats; immune to tuberculosis, Democratic panics and Hoover prosperity."

This sign calls attention to one of the most attractive and certainly the cutest exhibit at the Greene County Fair this year.

The proud owner of the exhibit is Attorney J. A. Finney, this city, former city solocitor, who in his leisure time is a goat fancier. He has eight head on display near the calf shed.

There is no class for goats at the fair but they are on display just the same, the attorney entertaining a secret hope that his pleadings with the fair board may be answered some time and a goat department added to the exposition.

The display includes two milk goats of the Swiss Toggenberg variety, one of which has three kids two weeks old.

Raising goats is Attorney Finney's pet hobby and he has been at it for the last ten years.

BELLBROOK

After an elapse of three years, Bellbrook and Waynesville, both of whom had met defeats and won victories on the once famous battle field, known as "The Wilderness," came together on the Waynesville diamond near the swimming pool last Sunday afternoon for the first of a series of three games. The tall giant form of Guy McMichaels, on the mound for the visitors, seemed to hold a sort of hypochondriacal spell over the homers who were held scoreless until the fifth inning, at which time an error on the part of an infielder, for the visitors allowed the first score. This was followed in the seventh by a succession of errors on the part of the visitors which swelled the home score to three. The home team scored one in the last half of the eighth inning, but fell down completely almost within reach of the goal when McMichaels turned loose in thunderbolt fashion with all the speed and new fangled curves at his command. The only home run scored was credited to Manager Zimmerman, who drove a long one into the race, scoring two ahead of him. Robert Edwards secured a two-bagger. Score: Bellbrook 6, Waynesville 4. The next game will be played on Magnetic Hill (home grounds) next Sunday, the game starting promptly at 3 o'clock.

OLD PICTURES SEEN

An interesting contrast between the Greene County Fair of today and the exposition as it was staged forty years ago is provided in pictures on display in the show window of the Commercial and Savings Bank, furnished by J. Robert Bryson, fair board secretary. Pictures taken of the crowds and racing at the 1929 fair are on exhibit as well as views of the Bryson combination horse sale at the fairgrounds in 1890.

"HEIGH-HO, COME TO THE FAIR"

Writer Finds Many Interesting Things At County's Annual Exposition

By MILDRED MASON

"Heigh-ho come to the Fair!"

So, in the words of Helen Taylor, the composer, Greene Countians were bid to the ninety-first annual Greene County Fair, which opened inauspiciously Tuesday afternoon and will continue through Friday. The showers of Tuesday afternoon did not dampen the spirits of Greene County men and women but only tended to buoy them up as the rains have been needed for so long.

Very attractive, indeed, will the Fair seem to Greene County housewives this year, for unusually interesting displays have been arranged to catch their eye and suit their fancies. The Art Hall, the mecca for women, was bright with its array of fancy work, quilts, linens and hand-painted china. A color note was lacking here, however, for the large display of bright-colored blooms in the flower show was missing due to the drought and hot weather. Another interesting feature to be noticed in the Art Hall is that there is a larger area of space for the display of articles. Heretofore, the 4-H Club exhibits were shown here but this year they have been removed to the Grange Hall, thus allowing more room in the Art Hall.

Mrs. L. H. Jones, in charge of the Art Hall, says that this year there is a larger number of exhibitors and exhibits in this department than in any previous year, thus assuring one that an entire afternoon could be spent in this building alone. Music from radios, being displayed by Xenia merchants, creates a pleasant atmosphere, to add to the attractiveness.

The Grange Hall is another interesting building to visit while on the grounds. In addition to the exhibits of the various Greene County Granges the 4-H Clubs have arranged booths containing their displays, which show their talent and achievements during the year.

Another feature which should be of interest to the women is the dining hall. For years it was the custom for the women to work the day before preparing the dinner, frying chicken and baking cawe, for a picnic at the Fair, but the dining hall on the grounds, in charge of the women of the Friends Church at Jamestown, is serving meals thus saving Greene County wives all the extra labor and giving them more time to enjoy the Fair.

This year, the State Board of Health, assisted by local authorities, is showing a set of motion pictures and slides, concerning health problems. The display is under cover, with comfortable seats provided, and should be very well worth while.

Not only for the women, but there are the usual attractions arranged for the kiddies. The "balloon man" is there, barking his various wares of whips, balloons, whistles and balls. There is the ferris wheel and merry-go-round as usual, but the "merry mixup" and "whip" are missing. Then there is pink lemonade, cotton candy, sugar waffles, ice cream candy and other confections to satisfy that ever-increasing hunger which one always possesses when at the Fair.

The midway is lined with the always-present sideshows, games of chance and fortune-telling booths which hold their appeal to the country lad and lass.

Of course the races will attract many to the grandstand, but for those who do not care for this sport it is assured that one can spend an entertaining, as well as instructive afternoon at Greene County's 1930 Fair.

Paris Fashions Return To "Gay Nineties" For Ideas

By ALICE LANGELIER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

PARIS, Aug. 6.—Fashions for women reverted with a 40-year back jump to the styles of the "gay nineties" as the eagerly-awaited creations of the famous couturiers of Paris were displayed to hundreds of foreign buyers today.

"Leg o'mutton" sleeves, barrel muffs and abbreviated fur capes gave the fashion parades in the various ateliers the air of historical pageants. As in McKinley's time, milady of 1931 will be obliged to gather up her skirts and once again her dainty feet will be "like little mice" peeping in and out.

For many of the most favored creations have long, swirling skirts and long trains, presaging another possible "revolt" against the Parisian dictum by dress designers in other parts of the world who press for re-emancipation of women from the voluminous gowns of another era.

Scores of novelty creations by the well-known designers attracted the attention of spectators as the various fashion shows opened. Patou burst upon the horizon with a startling "Peekaboo" cocktail frock, one of the most sensational creations shown. The frock features a daring "open-front" bodice, joined at the neck and waist, and fashioned of bottle green crepe.

Redfern is specializing in "suspender" evening gowns, held up by flimsy gold and silver straps crossing at the back and attached to the shoulders, presaging a revival of "galluses" in smart company.

The majority of afternoon and evening gowns are excessively long, but sports and morning frocks are pretty much the same as last year. With new exhibitions opening tomorrow and Thursday, a number of sensational new departures are expected.

ROBS CLOTHES LINE

George Coleman, 31, colored, E. Church St., who, police charge, stripped a line in the rear of the home of Asa Price, Pleasant St., of clothing valued at $132.50 last Monday noon, will be arraigned before Municipal Judge E. Dawson Smith Wednesday on a grand larceny charge. Coleman, arrested Monday denied stealing the clothes although admitting the stolen property was in his possession and showing police where it was hidden.

PUBLIC ADDRESS SYSTEM FOR FAIR

Greene County Fair patrons will hear all public announcements this year over a modern "Public Address System" which will prove a distinct advantage over the former method of making announcements through a megaphone.

The system will be used by the race starter in announcing the results of heats and will also be used by the race starter in announcing the results of heats and will also be used for the team pulling contest and other events. It consists of a sixteen-tube amplifying set connected with a microphone, and the human voice, increased in volume, will be focused through three powerful radio speakers arranged on top of the judge's stand, so that it can be heard over most of the Fair grounds.

The device, which was recently purchased by the Xenia Gazette for broadcast of news events, is installed by Harry Hagler, radio expert of near Xenia, and will be operated under his supervision.

NAME NEW MANAGER FOR BRANCH STORE

Announcement is being made of the appointment of Argus Swisher, formerly of Zanesville, as the new manager of the branch store of Cussins and Fearn Co., E. Second St., this city. He succeeds L. E. Smith, resigned.

Mr. Swisher was born and reared near Springfield and has had several years experience handling merchandise such as lumber, paints, hardware and farm materials before becoming connected with Cussins and Fearn, with which firm he has been connected a number of years. Before coming to Xenia Mr. Swisher was manager of the Cussins and Fearn Co., branch store in Zanesville for a year.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

MY SIN—Why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brothers's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye? Or how wilt thou say to thy brother, Let me pull out the mote out of thine eye; and behold, a beam is in thine own eye? Thou hypocrite, first cast out the beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye.—Matthew 7:3.

VENUS OF MILO

Human nature of a sort has broken out again, this time in the little town of Winona Lake, Ind., home of the evangelist William A. Sunday, and favored as a summer resort by those who enjoy the religious assemblies which gather there. For 20 years a reproduction of the celebrated Venus of Milo has stood in the town. There it might have stayed without comment had not a summer visitor from Chicago seen fit to object. When the statue was recently removed to a location near the fire engine house, she caused poison ivy to be planted at its base, expressing the hope that in time the ivy would veil the "indecent figure." Winona Lake's firemen, seeing nothing prurient in the Venus, promptly uprooted the ivy by turning the fire hose on it. A civic controversy ensued. The chief of police defended the firemen by stating that Mr. Sunday had never objected to the presence of the Venus, and that "It it's O. K. with Billy, it's O. K. with me."

The original statue of the Venus of Milo, discovered on the island of Melos in the Aegean sea in 1820, has been in the Louvre in Paris since the reign of Louis Philippe, to whom it was presented by its purchaser, the French ambassador to Constantinople. As possibly the most priceless object in the Louvre, the Venus has a large room to herself. The body is nude to the waist, but from the hips downward soft draperies clothe its limbs. The delicate and graceful proportions of the statue have long been considered ideal. Altogether it is conceded to be a conception of chaste and noble intent executed by a sculptor of unquestioned technical skill.

It has remained for the matron at Winona Lake to bring a charge of indecency against this loveliness of line and form. We do not envy her this distinction, and can only trust that someone of the good people at Winona Lake will enlighten her, as Anatole France's Abbe Coignard spoke to M. Nicodeme, a fictional Anthony Comstock, who had fig leaves placed on all the statues in Paris. Instead of commending him, the wise Abbe declared that nothing could come of his action save the creation of a general state of mind which would induce Parisians who chanced upon any fig leaves in the course of their pastoral rambles to turn over the leaves to see what might be hidden beneath them.

THE ENDURANCE AGE

What kind of a champion are you? Have you displayed the endurance to become a flash-in-the-pan hero, heralded as king for a day, only to be forgotten before tomorrow's sunrise? Right now it happens to be tree-sitting that is the rage.

Add a new line of endeavor to those occupied by marathon dancers, flagpole sitters, fishermen, rocking-chair performers and outboard motor die-hards.

Back not so many years ago, 10-year-olds got their first experience in endurance contests on the business end of a hoe, at husking bees, in the potato patch gathering bugs or in the garden pulling weeds.

It's a safe bet that had any lad back in those dear, dead days tried to corner a sitting championship dad would have cured him for all time with a flailing hickory shingle in the woodhouse.

The WAY of the WORLD

CLOTHES AND PARADES

Preaching dress reform and wearing blouses, a number of men met in New York some days ago to start a crusade against coats and vests in hot weather. They had a luncheon and a parade. Both created little excitement. The average human doesn't care to be herded or paraded, and he will decide for himself what he wants to wear, all the way from galluses up or down. Speeches about dress reform are about as stimulating as speeches about spelling reform. We are organized up to the hilt now. One thing that has accounted for the rapid advancement of the American republic is the fact that so far we have known where to draw the line in allowing ourselves to be herded into a crusade—whether for setting up a communistic government or wearing pajamas on the street.

WORKING AT VACATIONS

Vacation is hard work for many. It is rather pathetic to see so many people running hither and thither, struggling so persistently to have a good time. They plan for weeks to spend a few days at a summer cottage where they end up by being just one-half as comfortable as they would at home. The wife, tired of cooking and washing dishes, long, hot trip, and arrives in a different place with fewer es and starts in to cook and wash dishes. Too many nned without the comfort of the wife in mind.

there is something to be said for going away, for seeking change of place even at considerable discomfort. For the thing most need in the way of vacation is a change of mind, a change of routine. It is not so easy to re-route the mind's activity and remain at home or in the shop.

IMPATIENCE

Nervous wrecks and dyspeptics come from the habit of impatience. We can't wait to get somewhere or do something. Often the whole matter we are excited about is trivial. W. J. Benedict, New York preacher, says:

"It takes courage and persistence. What we need today is more patient understanding. Patience is not merely standing by and waiting. It is power. It is like heat or electricity. It is real patience which get things done in the long run. Unhappiness and restlessness come from impatience."

THE HUMAN JAW

Today we have softer foods than our ancesters had. We chew less, swallow more easily. Thus the human jaw becomes smaller. It shrinks and is less powerful. On the other hand, the jaw gets more exercise of a different sort. We talk more.

WHAT WOMEN CAN DO

Marian McClench, president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, says too many women run tea rooms and not enough go in for the professions—law, medicine, etc. And women do not do so well in business because many go into it with too little experience.

How about leaving some of the women at home?

How should enamel woodwork be washed so as not to remove the gloss?

Enamel paint is dulled by soap. Such paint should be cleaned by rubbing first with a woolen or cotton flannel cloth wrung out of hot water, and then with a clean, dry cloth. Spots, stains, and dirt that will not yield to hot water alone may be removed with a fine scourer, but it must be applied lightly in order not the scratch the surface.

An Ugly Weapon

What kind of a weapon was the Roman gladius?

The gladius was generally a two-edged blade, rather broad and of nearly equal width from hilt to point. It was about two and one-half feet long.

Miniature Golf

What is the best material for making the fairways of a miniature golf course?

The best greens material for a miniature golf course, in the opinion of one expert, while quite expensive, is to make a good frame for the fairways and greens, cover this with tar paper, then put a layer of deadening felt one-half inch thick over the tar. Over this foundation a special rubber matting, that can be bought from one or two of the large rubber companies, is placed. The top of this mat is covered with green granulated rubber. A cheap greens material is cotton seed hulls dyed and mixed with red engine oil. This is put over a cinder base and rolled to a thickness of about an inch or two.

World's Longest Road

Where is the longest paved road in the world?

The Best Ear

Do both ears record sounds with equal clearness?

The United States government, after testing the hearing of about 2,000 school children, found that the left ear was superior to the right in picking up sounds.

Fall's Conviction

What crime was Albert B. Fall accused of during his term of office?

On Oct. 25, 1929, Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior under Harding, was found guilty of accepting a bribe of $100,000 from Edward L. Doheny in the leasing of the Elk Hill naval oil reserve during the Harding administration. He was sentenced to a year in prison and a fine of $100,000, which he has appealed.

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.—Syl Sullivan, industrial economist and wizard of the "mike," was holding forth the other afternoon on "Silk Worms and Honey Bees."

In the course of his talk, by transition sweet, he slid to the object of home cooking, fresh eggs and things, and then he said:

"Where, in New York, can one procure DUMPLINGS—good, old-fashioned, palate-tickling, wholesome and alluring DUMPLINGS?"

If you are one of those benighted individuals who thinks that there are no ladies left in Manhattan who fuss around the old pot-and-pan garage, you ought to take a squint at some of Mr. Sullivan's next-day's mail.

He received at least fifty protests from outraged female DUMPLING architects and, as he says: "Only the Lord knows how many more there are who couldn't master their emotions sufficiently to write."

CLASS, PLUS

New York's outstanding Pearl Pavilion and Diamond Den is located on the Rue de la Quince—a stately granite pile that fairly oozes wealth and respectability. The clerks have all been there for years and years and years. You never in all your life saw such a bunch of eminently respectable men as those clerks. Even the detectives—"house dicks" they're called in other shops, but "detectives" in this particular place—exude the spirit of all that is forthright and conscientious in the law.

It's some dump!

And they pride themselves on their clientele. They don't page customers with frayed purses. Naturally, they accept anyone's money; but by their attitude it's easily seen that in their partons, they crave Class.

A gentleman from the Middle Stratum entered this mausoleum the other day. He had a watch with a fractured main-spring. Would they repair it? They would. They did, and charged him $16 for so doing.

The gentleman from the Middle Stratum—who persipres, pays his debts and sits down and writes to the editor whenever he encounters injustice in life, following his usual bent, addressed a communication to the head of the Pearl Pavilion telling him that $16 for repairing the mainspring of a watch was an outrageous price and whatinell was he going to do about it?

The head of the firm wrote back and said: "How much do you think we should have charged you."

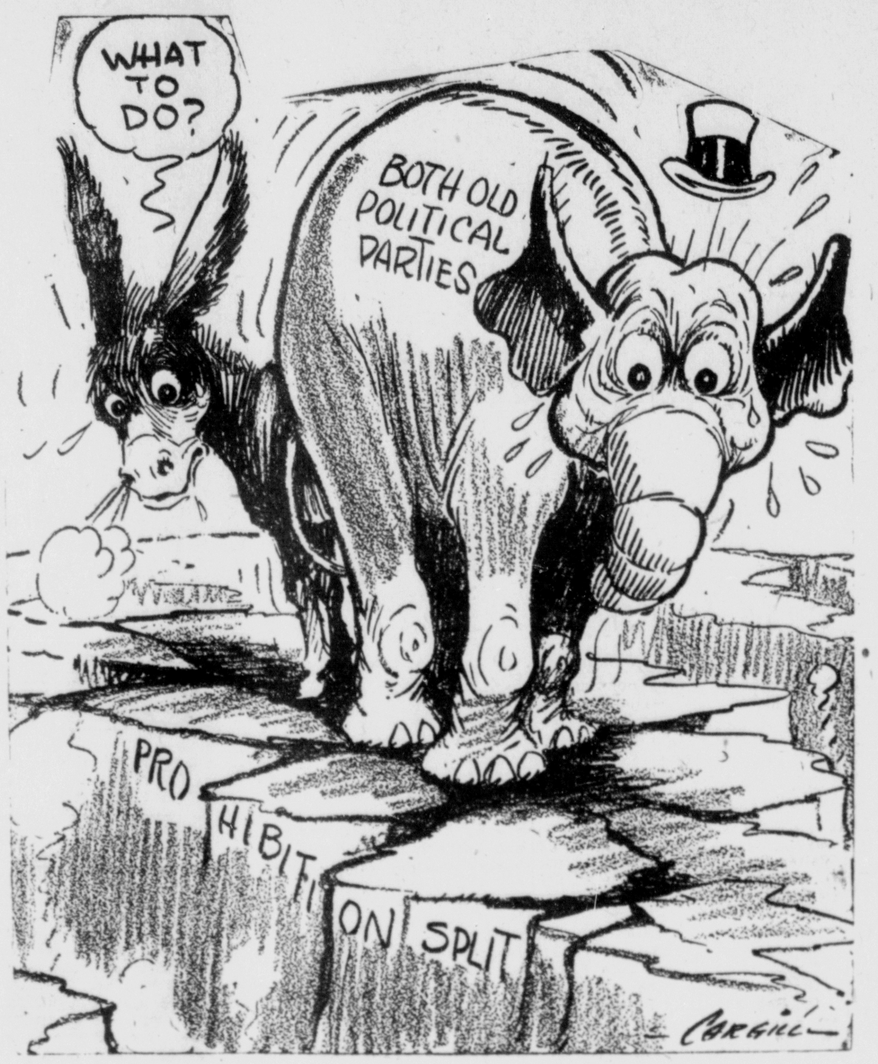

"Four dollars would have been a fair price," replied the man from the Middle Stratum.

The following day he received a check for $12.

The man is now walking round town telling everybody he meets about the transaction, not realizing that he is giving the concern thousands of dollars' worth of free publicity.

When they're too Respectable, look out. There's usually a trick in it somewhere.

SPEAKING OF EARTHQUAKE SUFFERERS

UNCLE SAM'S NEW CRUISERS WILL BE AIRCRAFT CARRIERS

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—America's new six-inch gun cruisers, under the London naval treaty, essentially will be small aircraft carriers—miniature Lexingtons and Saratogas—according to British experts, who describe them in a good deal of detail in English technical publications.

This may be one of the not infrequent cases in which the neighbors know more about our business than we ourselves know.

From what I hear at the navy department, Uncle Sam's constructors are still thinking over the problems raised by the London treaty. However, possibly some of them have talked tentatively with overseas specialists—fishing for others' ideas and trying to ascertain the latters' opinions concerning their own. Such chats do occur among fellow-craftsmen.

If the new vessels are to be "miniature Lexingtons and Saratogas" it is possible to visualize them pretty well, by examining either one of our big aircraft carriers through a diminishing glass.

Originally the Lexington and the Saratoga were to have been battle cruisers—a battle cruiser classing as a capital naval vessel, like a battleship, but faster, and, to permit of this greater speed, somewhat less heavily protected.

The Washington five-power treaty of 1921-'22 forced us to take them out of this category, however, and, as they were still under construction, both were altered to adapt them to aircraft carrying purposes.

To a landsman's eye, the most obvious change was the one shifting each vessel's funnels and entire superstructure from their time-honored position amidships to the extreme starboard, so as to leave the upper deck almost entirely clear for the taking off and landing of planes.

The ships proper (practically twin craft) are 850 feet long, with a 106-foot beam,, but their flying decks have an overhang, fore and aft, which gives them an extreme length of 880 feet.

Their speed is between 33 and 35 knots, and, by bringing them up into the wind and plowing ahead under full steam a plane is enabled to take off with a run of rather less than 200 feet.

The complement of planes per ship is about 72, of which 36 are bombers.

Displacement—33,000 tons; huge vessels.

Cost—planes and all, about $45,000,000 each.

In congress, from some sources, there has been considerable complaint of the expense of the two carriers' upkeep, but naval men appear to be fairly well satisfied with them. It is true that they do require large staffs of officers and men. Also that, being pretty vulnerable, they need more than the average amount of protection in action. Nevertheless, they themselves provide a tolerable share of this protection with their own planes and batteries; besides which, being so fast, they are exceptionally capable of avoiding danger.

The American six-inch gun cruisers described in British accounts, are planned, as represented in these overseas versions, on about a 9,000-ton basis, of 33 knots speed, and designed, like the bigger carriers, with all their upper works exaggeratedly to starboard, leaving their decks clear, but of course with far less room for the maneuvering of planes than the larger vessels. It is true, if necessary planes can be catapulted. The relative smallness of deck space in one respect should be an advantage, as affording a more difficult target to enemy airmen.

One British authority speaks of as many as 75 planes contemplated as the complement per cruiser—a ridiculously large number, however. Such ships might, some American experts say, provide accommodations for as many as 20 planes; certainly not more than that.

(Two is the ordinary number for British craft of the eight-inch cruiser type, but these vessels, to be sure, are not designed especially for aircraft carrying.)

The American ships' batteries, as English naval writers publish the story, will consist of nine six-inch guns mounted in three turrets piled pyramidally at the starboard side of the flight deck of each vessel.

The cost per cruiser is estimated (by the British) at around $12,000,000.

Peter's Adventures

By Mrs. Florence Smith Vincent

ANT USES HER HEAD

So sleepy was Queen Ant that she drifted into Slumberland with her mouth wide open. She might have been a good-looking insect if it hadn't been for those sharp mandibles of hers. For some reason or other Peter couldn't take his eyes off the edged teeth on the outside of Queen Ant's head. Worker Ant noticed him staring, and knew the boy was curious.

"I can tell you a thing of two about those 'outside jaws,' as we Ants call them, that might surprise you," remarked Peter's friend. "If I am any mind reader I'll bet you're guessing we Ant's eat with our jaws like you do. Well, de don't, at least we don't eat with our 'outside jaws.' We fight with them, if you want to know the truth. We Ants have plenty of enemies who wish us ill, not only wish us ill, but set upon us. We'd be in a pretty fix if we didn't know how to repulse their atack. But when in pitch battle we meet an enemy face to face, we seize him by the throat and shake him to pieces."

Worker Ant looked so fierce that Peter backed away hastily. Worker Ant snickered.

"Come now, don't be afraid of me. I was talking of an enemy, not a friend. However, to continue if you think all we Ants use our mandibles for is to fight, you are badly mistaken. We dig with them, use them to saw 'lumber,' we cut up twigs and stems with them, too."

As suddenly as she had begun, Worker Ant stopped talking. Then Peter felt a tug at his sleeve. Worker Ant had it in her mouth.

"Come along with me!" mumbled Worker Ant. "We've wasted enough time in silly talk while Old Time is flying."

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

By MRS. MARY MORTON

MENU HINT

Stuffed Tomatoes
Creamed Potatoes
Buttered Beets Frozen Custard
Hot Tea with Lemon

This menu is one of those that are equally appetizing at luncheon or dinner at night. Plenty of fruits and vegetables and little meat should be the rule in every household during the hot weather.

TODAY'S RECIPES

Stuffed Tomatoes—Six firm tomatoes, one-half package soft cheese, one-half cup chopped celery, one-half cup chopped stuffed olives, one tablespoon chopped green pepper, one-fourth to one-half cup mayonnaise. Hollow out tomatoes, turn upside down to drain, chill. Cut cheese in tiny cubes and mix with the other ingredients, including the tomato pulp. Use enough mayonnaise to flavor well. Pack the tomatoes with the cheese mixture and chill in refrigerator, or, if you have an electric refrigerator, freeze for one hour in the refrigerator tray. Serve on shredded lettuce with more salad dressing if desired.

Frozen Custard — Four cups milk, two eggs, one-half cup sugar, one-half teaspoon salt, two cups light cream, one-half tablespoon vanilla. Scald milk. Beat eggs with sugar and salt. Pour a small amount of the scalded milk onto this, stirring constantly. As soon as it is well mixed, turn all back into double boiler and cook, stirring constantly until the custard coats the spoon. Remove from fire, add cream and cool. When sufficiently cold, add vanilla, pack in freezer, using eight parts ice to one of salt, let stand five minutes, then turn slowly at first until mixture starts to freeze, at which time increase the speed to give a whipping motion. When stiff, remove dasher, pack in additional ice and salt if needed, and let stand several hours before serving.

SUGGESTIONS

Fried Tomatoes

Slice two large, ripe tomatoes, dredge heavily with flour and fry brown in a generous amount of butter in a heavy frying pan. Fry tomatoes a very deep brown, as this gives them the desired flavor. When brown on both sides, cut or mash to a pulp with a spoon, then add one-half cup of cream—or one-half cup of milk and four tablespoons evaporated milk and salt and pepper. Stir constantly and cook until smooth. If sufficient flour has been used, no additional thickening need be added.

Take Child Early To Surgeon

By LULU HUNT PETERS, M. D.

"Is cleft-palate hereditary? Is this caused by a pre-natal accident, or is it just one of those inexplicable happenings? A."

It is believed that most cases of cleft-palate and hare-lip are congenital; that is, the condition arises after the child is conceived, A. (Hare-lip does not always accompany cleft-palate, and vice-versa.)

Both conditions are due to a failure of the development and union of the structures of the palate and lip. It is also true that they are inherited—that is, the tendency to this lack of development is passed on by the original germ cells of the father or the mother, or both. And this tendency is especially apt to be passed on through inheritance if these defects have occurred in both sides of the family.

It is believed by not a few superstitious individuals that these defects are caused by "markings" from maternal impressions, but we believe there is no scientific basis for markings from such a source. And certainly hare-lip and cleft-palate are not due to such markings, for these are known to develop as early as the sixth week of the life of the embryo—very often before the mother actually realizes she is with child.

The only treatment is surgical, and the best time to do the repair has not yet been settled. Many surgeons believe that the earlier it is done, the better.

"I have a maid who persists in leaving spoons in foods that are put away in the cupboards or ice box. Would it be poisonous to the system if the spoons were left in acid foods, jellies, pickles, etc.? Also, is it safe to leave cereals and other foods in aluminum dishes over night to reheat the next day in the same utensil?

In any metal utensil there may be some slight erosion of the metal, caused by the acids and alkalies in the foods, if they remain long in them, Mrs. L., so it is best not to do this. (In cooking in such vessels, there is such a slight amount of erosion that it has no effect.)

I don't know of any research work that has been done to show just how much metallic element is released when spoons are left in acid foods, but the discoloration and bitter taste might be considerable, so it should not be done.

"I have a small lump on my back near the shoulder. My family doctor told me it is a fatty tumor and that I should not worry about it. It does not hurt, but itches frequently. I am 45 years old. What is your opinion?

"MRS. S."

My opinion is that you should have it removed now, when the operation would be very slight, Mrs. S. Those tumors, while there is perhaps no danger of their degenerating to cancer, sometimes grow to enormous size, and they certainly are disfiguring and discomfiting.

Editor's Note: Requests for articles or pamphlets on hand must be accompanied by a full y self-addressed, stamped envelope, plus the following small charge to help cover cost of orinting and handling: for each article wanted, two cents in coin; for each pamphlet, 10 cents in coin. The pamphlets are Reducing and Gaining, Hygiene of Women, The Urinary System. Address Dr. Peters Bureau, in care of this paper. Write legibly and not over 200 words.

White Lie May Be Embarrassing

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"Dare to be true; nothing can need a lie;
A fault which needs it most, grows two thereby."

If we could remember that quotation we wouldn't lie so light heartedly and industriously, would we? One little white lie doesn't seem so bad, but it sometimes brings very embarrassing results.

Of course there are lies that we all tell that seem, at least in this stage of civilization, necessary. Among these are the lie that you tell when you say your hostess' dinner is fine when it isn't—or that you have had a nice time at her party when you were bored to death. Those unpleasant truths that even as a "best friend" you can't tell without incurring everlasting hatred.

But, generally speaking, it certainly is the "best policy" to tell the truth. A young girl writes me she is embarrassed "to tears." I expect, although she doesn't use just that expression, by some silly little untruths she told a young man. Now she doesn't know how to set herself right in his eyes.

"Dear Virginia Lee: I have written to you before so I am not a newcomer to your wonderful department. I am so worried! Several months ago I met a boy whom I thought I would never see again, so I told several lies which I now regret very much.

"I am just 16, so when he asked my age I said 17—18 in November, because he is 19, and 16 sounds so young. I quit school last Christmas, but I told him I was to graduate in December.

"What made me tell these lies I don't know, because really, Virginia, I am not a liar. I went back to where I first met him and kept going back until now I realize I love him and I think he likes me quite well, too.

"Just recently he asked me again when I was to graduate, and I told him at Christmas. I just didn't have the nerve to confess I quit school. What am I to do? I swear I'll never tell another lie to a boy because a girl never knows but what he isn't the ONE boy. Be truthful to the boy friends, girls!

"Please help me, Virginia.

"ARDISS."

Nothing to do but 'fess up, sister. And break yourself right away of the habit of lying, not only to boy friends, but to anyone. It will get you into a lot of messes and it's a terrible habit to get into. Personally, I detest a person whose word I can't trust.

George Jr., comes to bat again with the following very nice letter, which, in justice to him, as we have all been panning him, I shall print.

"Dear Miss Lee: I just returned from a nice trip east, and, of course, the first thing I looked up was your column. And I guess I was getting panned.

As for Joan, more power to her, if she is sincere. But I'd like to meet her without her knowing who I was. I'd soon find out. Sounds like I think a lot of myself, doesn't it? But I don't. It's just all in the game.

"Perhaps Joan is right, but it seems to me if you (I mean us boys) don't neck any girl we might be with, they sure give us the horse laugh. And what I mean, dates become mighty scarce to any boy who won't or don't do more or less necking.

"And show me a girl who won't or hasn't done her share of necking and I'll do my best to 'corral' her for life. I thank you.

"GEORGE, JR."

Beet Juice Makes Good Face Rouge

By GLADYS GLAD

While walking through a department store recently, I was attracted to a cosmetics table where a woman was demonstrating with liquid rouge. The crowd around her was enormous, and no wonder! She was applying a portion of the liquid rouge to her cheeks to show its effectiveness, and then drinking the remainder!

This, of course, was to demonstrate that the rouge was pure and a harmless compound. It would be wonderful if all our cosmetics were as harmless as this particular rouge, although none of us contemplate making a breakfast or luncheon of our cosmetics.

However, there was really nothing new about the demonstration. The probability is that the rouge was nothing more than beet juice. And anyone in the world who has any qualms about the manufactured product can press the juice from a beet and have an excellent rouge. Farm women have used beet juice for rouge for ages. And many of them will probably continue to use it, as innumerable women continue to use cucumbers for bleaches, and plain bread dough for face masks.

It will surprise many of my readers to know that the juices of fruits and vegetables are the bases of many cosmetics, and are oftentimes the sole coloring agents.

In the matter of beet juice for rouge, it isn't possible to obtain any shade from it but a beet juice shade. And it is in the refining of color, in the blending of it with other colors, that the manufacturers have improved upon the primitive methods of obtaining this cosmetic.

We all know the value of lemons, salt, tomato, beet and cucumber juices as beauty aids. One manufacturer of cold cream uses honey in her product—the one food in the world that is sure energy, and never deteriorates. No matter how we may improve upon Nature's products in the beauty field, however, we cannot get very far from them as basic elements.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

Weight

Sally: Your standard weight is about 110 pounds. Near-sightedness can be cured if the condition is treated by a reliable oculist.

Eyelashes

C. M., Jeannette, Sally, E. Konoz and A. L. G.: Any good brand of plain white or yellow vaseline, or plain castor oil applied to the eyelashes and eyebrows will promote their growth, and make them long and heavy. Olive oil is not as effective. Castor oil will not fatten the eyelids.

Develop Bust

Florence C.: Yes, cocoa butter will help to develop the bust. Warm the cocoa butter, and massage it into the bust with an upward stroke. Lemon juice is an excellent bleach for the hands.

EDITOR'S NOTE: While it is impossible for Miss Glad to answer beauty questions by mail she will be happy to send you her pamphlets on "The New Figure" and "Beauty Culture" if you will write her care of this paper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope and 10 cents in coin, for each to cover cost of printing and mailing. Personal questions on beauty will be answered through Miss Glad's daily column.

FRAMED by Phil

Paul "Pop" Boxwell, one of the most outstanding all-around, athletes ever developed at Xenia Central High School, has placed his John Hancock on the dotted line of a one-year contract to coach athletics at the high school at Delta, O., located about twenty miles west of Toledo, during the 1930-31 school year.

Boxie will teach mathematics and will coach football, basketball and possibly track. The Delta high school has an enrollment of about 250 students and faces a stiff nine-game schedule on the gridiron this fall, Boxie says.

The fall term will not open until September 8 but Boxie will leave Xenia August 30 in order to take the football candidates on a week's outing to Sand Lake around Lake Michigan.

"Pop" graduated from Xenia Central High in 1922 after starring in basketball and football for four years. He attended Ohio State University for two years and finished his higher education at Wilmington College, graduating this year. At Wilmington Boxie gained quite a reputation as a defensive fullback and also played basketball to some extent.

During the last four summers he has been pitching in softball games in Xenia and last year was the leading hitter of the National League. He is affiliated with Geyers this season and while not leading the batsmen is nevertheless in the .400 class and is just about the most dangerous batter in the league.

Walter Winchell had the right idea when he said "take it from Mrs. Winchell's little boy Walter, we found out a long time ago that a good gag was worth a bust on the jaw." He added: "And we're warning you just as we warned Edgar Selwyn, the producer, who told the town that he was going to slap our face—you may want to slap our face but you'll have to take your turn in line." If our body is ever found in Shawnee Creek, question Hy Hyman for the following reason. We went on record with the statement that it was Sam Huston who was playing the No. 11 pipe hole on the Henrie Bros course the other night when a ball he had hit in the pipe failed to emerge on the green. Investigation disclosed a huge toad was blocking the passage. It seems that it was not Sam at all but was other than Isadore who was the principal in this little incident. Mistakes will happen, and often do in the best regulated columns.

John Hurley has pitched his last game of ball this season for the Lang Chevrolets, prospective champions of the National Softball League. Bill Baxley says he understands that Hurley is to enroll at Bliss Business College at Columbus next week for a course lasting fourteen months, more or less.

The early days of softball in Xenia were recalled to mind Monday night when Company L forfeited its game with Ki-Ro and the boys chose up sides for a game. The big "kick" came when "Tiny" Smith knocked a home run and pranced around the bases in a manner reminiscent of the time the Senior Business Men had a softball team with Wilker Gibney, Joe Gable and others in the lineup.

The regular infield of the Cincinnati Reds does pretty well considering the fact each player is playing out of his accustomed position. Jersey Joe Stripp at first base is a third baseman, recently converted to take George Kelly's place; Horace Ford at second was heretofore always found at shortstop; Durocher at short is more at home although he had been playing second most of the time since joining the Reds; Tony Cuccinello at third is more accustomed to second base.

RAIN PREVENTS SOFTBALL GAME

For the second time this season a sudden rainstorm prevented the Downtown Country Club and Graham Paints softball teams from getting together Tuesday night to play a National League game which, after all, was probably of small importance to either team inasmuch as nothing in particular hinged on the outcome.

Under an agreement reached at the beginning of the season this game will probably never be played off this summer unless it is discovered that the result of the contest would have an important bearing on the league race, which is unlikely.

MERCHANTS TO PLAY LINCOLN CUBS HERE

Xenia Merchants will play a return game with the Lincoln Cubs, of Dayton, instead of the Dayton White Sox next Sunday afternoon at Washington Park. Manager Jess Chambliss explains that the three-game series with the White Sox will not be played on successive Sundays and that that colored team will not appear here again until August 24. Sunday after next the Merchants will oppose the Jamestown Independents in a game that will have all the aspects of a struggle for diamond supremacy in Greene County.

BOWERSVILLE WINS FROM SHILOH TEAM SUNDAY AFTERNOON

Bowersville Independents whipped the Shiloh baseball team, 11 to 3 Sunday afternoon to register its eleventh victory in fifteen games this season, and next Sunday will visit Lynchburg to play a game with the team of that place.

Changes in the Bowersville lineup were noticed Sunday, the shifts being made in the interest of strengthening the team. Several new players took part in the contest and older players were transferred to other positions.

R. Hargrave, shortstop, had a perfect day at the plate with three singles and a triple in four times up. His three-baseblow came at an opportune time in the fifth stanza with the bases loaded. Kite obtained three safeties for Shiloh. Box score:

No. 11—The Straight Sideline Shot

The straight sideline shot is one of the most effective shots in tennis. Both forehand and backhand strokes must be developed to the same degree of get even balance. The backhand straight sideline shot is the harder of the two to execute, so take greater care with it.

Realize that in playing the sideline shot you are covering always the shorter distance of flight. Practice returning your opponent's cross-court shot with a straight shot.

One of the most secure defenses consists of playing every ball down the sideline as this keeps up your court to score. The straight sideline shot is your greatest weapon for stopping a net rusher.

When your adversary rushes to the net disregard him and concentrate placing your shot directly down the sideline, but hit it carefully and not too hard, otherwise your errors on this shot will be many. When playing a series of straight shots, do not play a cross-court shot unless you are prepared for your opponent's counter return to your uncovered area. PRACTICE PLAYING A DEEP STRAIGHT SHOT and following it to the net to kill the return which most times WILL BE CROSS-COURT.

Next: Service.

REPORTS HEARD AT ROTARY MEETING

Reports of the conference of presidents and secretaries of the twenty-second district of Rotary were heard when members of the Xenia Rotary Club held their weekly luncheon meeting at the Elks' Club Tuesday noon. Since it was the first meeting this month a short business session was held at which Louis Hammerle, president, presided.

Mr. Hammerle and Purl E. Cox, who represented the Xenia club at the conference held last week, each gave reports of the meeting. "Doc" Williams, secretary of the Lebanon Rotary Club was a guest at Tuesday's luncheon and he delivered a short address in which he described one session of the Middletown conference.

Farm Notes

SPRAY POTATOES WEEKLY DURING HOT WEATHER

Potatoes must be sprayed at least once a week during hot weather to get a satisfactory yield. The intense rays of the sun during midsummer are injurious to potatoes, and at the same time hopperburn becomes very serious. A heavy coat of Bordeaux spray serves as a shade and protects the leaves to some extent from the sun. Bordeaux is also the best preventive known for the hopperburn disease.

Experiments by Paul E. Tilford, associate in Botany and Plant Pathology at the Ohio Experiment Station, on the shading effect of Bordeaux mixture have shown that the whiter the coating of spray the greater the cooling effect on the internal tissue of the leaf. For this reason it is advisable to add extra lime to the spray during midsummer. Bordeaux made according to a 4-7-50 formula rather than the usual 4-6-50 whitens the leaves considerably.

The hopperburn disease is caused by an insect known as the leafhopper. The leaf tips and edges first turn yellow and then brown. Hot, dry weather hastens the development of the disease. Bordeaux acts both as a poison and as a repellant to the leafhopper.

Both heat injury and hopperburn are usually most serious about the time the late potato plants begin to set tubers. From this time on, or at least until the arrival of cooler weather in September, a spray should be applied every week.

HISTORY OF LIBRARY SHOWN HERE IN EXHIBIT OF INSTITUTES AT FAIR

The exhibit of the Greene County District Library at the Greene County Fair this year is a history of the library and shows the various steps in the formation of the institution. It dates back to the time when the library was first located on Green St., its removal to the present building on E. Church St., and down to the last few years when the Greene County District Library was organized with its sub-stations located in all parts of the county.

During the years of its location on Green St., the library suffered many financial difficulties and when in 1904 Andrew Carnegie made possible the present structure on E. Church St., it seemed that its troubles were at an end. The corner-stone of the new building was laid in 1904 and on that particular day a group of Xenia women, who had spent much time and effort in trying to make the library possible, gathered together for the occasion. Those in the group were Mrs. Sarah Harbine, Mrs. Lestra Kinney Kenyon, Mrs. Elizabeth Flynn, Mrs. Belle McDowell Patterson, Mrs. Louie Allison, Miss Belle Gatch, Miss Isadora King and Miss Etta McElwain.

Even after the removal of the library to its present location financial difficulties were encountered and to increase its funds the library tried in the following twenty years every form of organization, including a free library under the board of education, a county library under the county commissioners and finally the district library, which is serving the county at present.

During the last three years the circulation at the library has nearly tripled and now the library is able to serve all parts of the county where a number of years ago it was only possible to reach a few patrons. A resume of its growth is occupying a place of prominence at the Fair, it is announced.

TO GIVE PROGRAM

An interesting program of music, consisting of quartet arrangements, solo numbers, instrumental novelties and other features will be presented by members of the male quartet of Muskingum College, New Concord, O., at the First United Presbyterian Church, E. Market St., Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. A silver offering will be taken at the program.

Members of the quartet are: Roy Haynes, Hanover, O., first tenor; Robert Smith, Aliquippa, Pa., second tenor, John Galloway, Akron, baritone; Frank Neff, St. Clairsville, O., bass; and Howard White, Youngstown, O., pianist. The quartet is traveling by motor and is touring Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York and other states in the interest of the college.

The public is cordially invited to the program which is assured to be entertaining and well worthwhile.

LANGS WILL TANGLE WITH DAYTON TEAM

The Lang Chevrolet Co. softball team, leader of the Xenia National League, will help out in the celebration of "Booster Day" at the North Side ball field in Dayton Wednesday afternoon, meeting the Shroyer and Sons softball nine at 2 o'clock in the preliminary event on the program.

The softball game will be followed by a series of field events and at 3:15 o'clock the Dayton Aviators, with a record of four straight victories over the Forty Wayne Chiefs, returned to their home lot to face Springfield in a Central League game.

Rivalry between Langs and Shroyers has been keen this season and as the two teams are about evenly matched a corking good game may be expected. This game will be the first on the program.

PAUL H. CRESWELL

Greene County voters at the August primary will have the opportunity of expressing approval of the candidacy of Auditor Paul H. Creswell, to appear before the electorate at the November election to succeed himself as county auditor. Mr. Creswell never sought elective office before this present contest. He was appointed to his office as auditor because of the elevation of former Auditor Ralph Wead to his present position as deputy state auditor.

Trained for a decade under the careful and able auditorship of Ralph Wead, Mr. Creswell has a most thorough-going knowledge of the duties of this highly important office. Mr. Wead's recognition in being named deputy state auditor was to some extent the result of Mr. Creswell's faithful service as the deputy under Mr. Wead. The conduct of the Greene County auditor's office is regarded over the state as second to none.

Most of the people of Bath Township will have a warm spot in their hearts for Auditor Creswell because of the special service he rendered a few months ago in very materially reducing the tax rate. This was done without impairing either maintenance or improvement requirements, though not without a great deal of inconvenience to the auditor's office. This spirit of willingness to serve his constituency is an outstanding characteristic of Mr. Creswell, a characteristic that should entitle his candidacy for nomination to the most careful consideration of all.

Audtor Creswell is one of the most active American Legion men in Greene County. Having seen many months of service overseas, he thoroughly appreciates the purpose and general spirit of the Legion organization, and has materially assisted it in various phases of its program.

In being appointed a member of Governor Cooper's tax commission, Mr. Creswell was given the distinction of being one of the two county auditors in the entire state to have a place on this important commission. With the re-arranging of our state tax laws that is sure to come next year as a result of the classification amendment being passed, it should be an advantage to Greene County to have its auditor one of the members of the state tax committee.

In every respect it would seem that the auditor's office would be well manned during the next four years should the present incumbent be returned.

—The Tri-County Herald.

DEATH CLAIMS MRS. MARY HUFNAGEL

Word has been received here of the death of Mrs. Mary Hufnagel, 54, which occurred Tuesday morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. C. M. Twitchell, on the Springfield Pike at Harries Station, near Dayton. Mrs. Hufnagel had always resided in or near Dayton.

She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Twitchell; a son, Guy Crawford, Harries Station and four brothers: Louis Barlow, Xenia; Harry Aden and James Barlow, Cedarville and one sister, Mrs. Johanna Burba, Cedarville.

Funeral services will be held at the residence of Mrs. Twitchell Friday morning at 10:30 o'clock with burial in Memorial Park Cemetery.

SPLASH! She Swims to Conquer

By Eleanore Burnett

Copyright, 1930, by Central Press Association, Inc.

READ THIS FIRST:

Kitty-Wilmot, super stenographer, crack swimmer, leaves her home on the death of her father to take a position in New York to live her own life and be "free." She makes a new circle of friends largely among those with whom she works. Atlee Wainright, chief clerk to her employer, Ellery Goss, Wall Street king, is very attentive and she likes him. Sally Ayers, head bookkeeper, she learns to love and admire. She meets Gordon Platt, Goss' confidential man, and is strongly attracted to him, but has already been warned that he is a gamber and a roue; Wainright hates him.

Put under his orders by Goss, she learns that there is an information leak in the offices, which must be stopped; she becomes in a way a private detective to help Platt find the leak. She meets him, unknown to the rest of the office, goes to dinner, for a ride, to the theater with him. Kitty is sure of her judgments; she is "always right." Convinced that Platt is what he has been said to be, she finds him deliciously, dangerously pleasant to be with.

Platt leaves for a two weeks' trip; on the night he goes she is surprised into making a very pleasant speech to him, and goes to bed with flaming cheeks and in fear of herself that she is on the way to like the wrong man too much.

CHAPTER 11

Much was to happen in the two weeks Platt was away. In the morning Kitty received a letter from John Spurgeon, inclosing a check for eight hundred dollars, the settlement of her father's small estate.

"I wanted to bring this to you, but I cannot affard it," he wrote. "Mother must go to Rochester for an expensive operation. I must find three thousand dollars; I don't know where, but it won't be by taking a trip to New York to see you."

When she deposited the check, Kitty asked her balance. "With this it is nine hundred and thirty dollars," she was told. Kitty nodded. The fund with which she had begun had been stolen, but she had saved a little from her very good salary. Impulsively she wrote her check for nine hundred dollars and sent it to John.

"You won't want to take it, but you must!" she wrote. "You can pay it back when you are ready. I have a good job and don't need the money. I will send you a hundred dollars a month as long as you need it. I can well afford it and I love your mother. You must take it for her, John, dear." She was glad John didn't know it was all she had!

Kitty was very happy over this; it always pleased her to do something for a friend, and she felt much better that she could repay the lawyer for his kindness at the time of her father's death. But she had little time that day to think of her act. Mr. Goss kept her very busy, and was unusually sardonic and difficult.

During the day she had two invitations; one was from Atlee for dinner and a visit to a night club; the other from Hilda, who asked her to a party on the following Saturday. "Don't tell any one, will you? It's not our office crowd!" The blond 'phone girl was very mysterious. "You'll meet Spike!"

Kitty did not care much about going to Hilda's; Sally's warning was not the reason, but she preferred Saturday evening at the Ayers. But she was too generous to spoil the pleasure of the hard-boiled and slangy receptionist, who seemed to regard it as very important that Kitty meet her Spike, the policeman about whom she had heard so much.

Atlee called for her early, at six, and drove her first to a quiet house in the seventies.

"Where are we going?" asked Kitty, as he paid off the taxi.

"Little girls musn't ask questions!" he smiled. "Won't you trust me?"

Kitty said no more. Of course she would trust Atlee!

The quiet house proved to be one of those unobstrusive foreign restaurants, inhabiting a made over private house, in which New York abounds. Kitty was ushered into an upstairs private dining room; a beautifully decorated table drew an exclamation of pleasure from her.

For the first time in her life Kitty tasted Chateau Yquem with her fish, and Mumm's with her dinner.

In Atlee Kitty discovered a new man at a dinner table. Thus far, while his eyes had been warm, and the swift kiss which had served as such a sudden introduction that first evening in the taxi had been hot, he had been rather diffident with her; now he was bold, gay, carefree, ardent.

11

Atlee crushed her to him.

Atlee talked interestingly and ceaselessly; she liked what he said, but more the way he said it. Kitty hardly believed he was serious, his expression and his tones both made of her nothing less than a queen.

From dinner he took her to the night club, and Kitty saw for the first time New York's night life as it is.

They danced often. With each dance, Atlee held her closer. Her dinner gown of peach chiffon, with transparent velvet wrap, slippers and hose matching the dress, and a chancel necklace and bracelet, represented an extravagance she would not have committed had John's letter come earlier; she had bought it to be seen with Platt, but—one must be well dressed on one's first appearance at a night club! She had been a little doubtful over its fit; Kitty protested to the saleswoman that it was almost too tight.

"Tres bien!" responded the sales girl. "Madamoiselle has ze right to wear it so!"

And Kitty had blushed and taken it. Now she did not care; it was a more modest gown than a dozen around her, and Atlee's arm pressing her tightly to him seemed to spell approval—

"Come on, let's get out of this!" he said thickly, after a two-encore dance. "I've something to show you—"

The taxi stopped before a tall apartment house in upper Park Avenue. Through dizzy eyes Kitty noted a quiet rich lobby, a uniformed hall porter and elevator boy, a swift and noiseless ascent to the eighth floor.

"Where—are we?" whispered Kitty.

A grave faced butler opened a heavy door and ushered Kitty into such an apartment as she had never dreamed existed. It seemed to have endless vistas and halls and rooms. The heaviest of oriental and Chinese rugs covered the floors. Furniture which even to Kitty's unpracticed eye spelled antiquity and pricelessness was to be seen in profusion. Kitty had a confused impression of much gold; gold ceiling, gold colored curtains, gold chairs. A huge gold and brown divan stood back of a black and gold fireplace, in which a golden blaze crackled merrily. A black and white dressed maid took her wrap; the butler brought in a tray with glasses.

"Mr and Mrs. Killiher say when they'd be here, Henderson? If they call, put them through here. That will be all, thank you—"

"Where's the 'phone?" asked Kitty. Atlee pointed to a gold and green inlaid cabinet.

"What a wonderful place!" cried Kitty, sitting on a couch. "Who are these people, Atlee? They must have oodles of money! I've never heard you speak of them to Sally—"

"No. And don't you. No need to tell all you know. But I wanted them to meet you—you darling!"

Kitty smiled at him. He was very handsome. The room was hushed and beautiful. Kitty had never felt such a warm glow of happiness! How good he was to her—this evening must have cost him a lot of money—

"Atlee! I'm all conscience struck! You can't afford to spend money on me like a—like a—"

"Like a drunken sailor?" suggested Atlee. "Why can't I?"

"Because—well, Mr. Goss pays good salarels, but you've shot a week's pay on this evening, at least!" protested Kitty.

Atlee smiled. "I am not wholly dependent on my pay!" he answered. "Don't worry, girlie!"

"But I can't repay you—I have no home to invite you to—"

"Feel the debt heavy on your heart?" he asked, sitting closer. "If you do—"

"Oh, I do!"

He slipped an arm around her. "I stole one once!" he whispered. "Now give me one—"

Kitty stirred restlessly in his arms; she started to protest. But the lights were very bright, the surroundings beautiful. Atlee was—sweet.

She turned towards him, the dimple much in evidence.

Atlee crushed her to him. He rained kisses on her cheeks, her dimple; his lips clung to her lips. For a moment the world went around.

"Don't—don't!" she cried.

"Don't? But I will!" he answered. "I've got you, now! You are mine, you darling, mine, do you hear? I'll never let you go—never, never—"

Kitty stared up into his eyes; eyes no longer clear and cold, the eyes of gentlemen. Now they were predatory, burning. Something in them seared a message that frightened her. She sprang up, hastily; terror in her heart.

Atlee, too, sprang to his feet. His arms were stretched out to take her when the curtains parted and the butler came in.

"You are wanted on the 'phone, sir!" he said respectfully.

The butler disappeared. Atlee picked up the 'phone and turned his back. As if all the devils in hell were after her, Kitty fled from the room, crashed open and shut the heavy door and fled down the stairs marked "exit" without her wrap, thoroughly frightened for the second time in her life.

The Theater

Gloria Swanson, the Cinderella of motion pictures who began as a Mack Sennett bathing beauty and woke up as one of the leading emotional actresses of the screen, has lost her marquis.

Without mentioning divorce, Gloria and the Marquis De La Falaise admit their paths have parted. De La Falaise came from Europe early this week for the announced purpose of conferring with Miss Swanson regarding the future. The Marquis registered at a hotel in Hollywood and Gloria continued to reside at her Malibu Beach home.

* * *

"We have lived apart for more than a year," said Gloria," and we have decided to continue doing so, although we remain the best of friends. Henri and I have found it convenient to maintain separate establishments."

The French nobleman frankly admitted that difficulties of maintaining their separate careers had interfered with the perfection of his marriage with the screen star, but, he said, no "open break" had occurred.

Meanwhile Hollywood speculated as to the future course of the interesting couple. Miss Swanson made a trip to Europe following her successful re-entry into pictures as a talkie artist, but De La Falaise then was in Sweden on a business trip in connection with his work as representative of a Hollywood film producer.

While Paris couturiers are displaying gowns that sweep the floor for the fall, Hollywood disagrees with the dictum that dresses must be longer. Most sport and business dresses and suit shirts are going to stop two to four inches below the knees, so that the leg and even the knee will remain visible in scenes on and off the screen.

The Hollywood studio fashion creators concede evening dresses will remain long, but not so long as last winter. The newest note for the fall is the long evening coat and wrap, some very long, very close-fitting and occasionally sleeveless. Legs will tell the time of day.

Beginning with what milady wears in the morning her hemline will creep floorward as the sun creeps westward. After the sun has disappeared, so with all vestige of legs. One new style, known as the "allure skirt", will form a sort of twilight, half way between daylight and dark. This gown will be long enough to conform to the evening mode when the wearer is standing and when she sinks into a chair, two slits along the sides of the skirt will open, revealing behind panels of fine black net, considerable of the feminine leg.

Ann Harding says her afternoon gowns will be ankle and her evening gowns floor length. Helen Twelvetrees decrees ankle length skirts only for afternoon. Constance Bennett's evening gowns will sweep the floor. Irene Del Roy's afternoon gowns will be twelve inches from the floor and Laura Lee will wear suits ten inches from the floor. Marilyn Miller wants her evening gowns one inch from the floor. And so on.

Twenty Years '10- Ago -'30

Mr. and Mrs. William F. Brennan and children left for Atlantic City, where they will spend a week or ten days.

Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Zell and daughter, Dorothy, are home from Washington C. H., where they attended the Fayette County home-coming.

A fifty-page scrap book containing everything that was printed about the 44th annual G. A. R. encampment has been completed by Miss Lillie Evers, who was seletced to do that work.

Modern Artists' Models Must Be Intelligent

"Beautiful But Dumb" Girls No Longer in Demand—Popular Posers Make Good Salaries.

BETTY JOHNSON GUIRLE ANDRE.

By ALICE ALDEN

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Beauty has become something more than a cult. It has become a profession and to the girl who realizes the assets of her beauty, charm and innate grace it offers a new field of achievement and success. The artist model is not what she used to be, or what she is supposed to have been—a good-looking girl who had nothing more to do than to look beautiful and stand still for hours and hours.

Today the artist model relies as much on her brain as on her charm and charms. And that is why the ranks of successful models contain several college girls, daughters of professional men and even society girls, all of them young and charming, all of them full of eager enthusiasm over their chosen profession. For modeling has become a profession, as one can learn from any famous commercial artist or photographer.

Leaders of Profession.

The charming young lady attired as a beautiful bride in the traditional white satin and cloud of tulle, the smart young debbie in a delectable beach ensemble, the cooly efficient secretary seated at a business-like desk wearing the latest office clothes or demonstrating the points of an office device—all these attractive pictures are posed by the girls who are leaders in their chosen profession.

An dthen again the illustrations that accompany the stories in periodicals and magazines, the same charming girls model for these too, and do their best to make the story even more interesting and intriguing than it is. Talk with some of the famous artists who are topnotchers in the field of magazine story illustrating and they will one and all tell you how much they owe to their models, and how much these same models help them in creating the correct atmosphere in the picture that helps tell the story.

The girls who are most in demand by photographers and artists live exceedipgly busy lives.

Their days are mapped with the precision usually associated with a busy executive. They dash from one sitting to another sustained by a hastily eaten sandwich, snatched in between appointments or eaten in a taxi while en route to a studio.

Their salaries? Quite startling when measured by even modern standards of adequate comepnsation. For the model who is constantly in demand makes anywhere from $100 to $200 a week, and very often receives dresses and accessories to boot. For the photographic sitting the compensation is at the rate of $10 per hour, and for a sitting to an illustrator, $5 for an hour's work. For work it is, despite so much sitting around and just looking nice or sad or cruel or fashionable. For that is where the brains come in.

Any artist will tell you that a good model will instantly suggest the picture he has in mind, or the situation he has been commissioned to depict. Her grace and intelligence both function in creating the correct pose and expression, and sometimes the model will even suggest a better idea for the illustration in hand.

Some of the Best

The highest paid models in the profession today are Betty Johnson, who poses for the girl of the "society" type; Joan Clemens—much in demand by photographers; Peggy Fish, a good-clothes type; Guirle Andre, very blonde and statuesque; Marian Moorehouse, a most aristocratic type, and Winifred Strickland, who instantly suggest a cut and fashionable "debbie." Many girls who are very much of society are also earning extra "pin money" by posing for photographers. One of these is Miss Hannah Lee Sherman, who is listed in the New York Social Register. She portrays, of course, the society girl as a bride, in evening clothes and other lovely raiment. It is said that her mother was at first opposed to her daughter, a scion of an aristocratic old family, doing this work. But after accompanying her daughter and seeing how interesting the work it, and how businesslike its methods and activities, it is said that she not only gave permission for her daughter to continue the work, but that she herself helps to arrange the appointments and schedules. Thus has the once-despised profession of modelling entered the ranks of society and created new standards of beauty combined with brains.

They Pay You

ADVERTISEMENTS pay you to read them. They pay you in time. From the advertisements in this newspaper you can learn where to get what you want, instead of searching around. You can know the merits of each article offered for sale.

They pay you in money. Advertisements help you to get full value for your dollars. Goods which are consistently advertised are of consistently high quality for their prices.

They pay you in satisfaction. Manufacturers and merchants will not undertake an advertising campaign until they are sure their product is right. It would be ruinous to advertise an unworthy product, for that would simply call added attention to its deficiencies.

They pay you in information. Advertisements tell of new products, of new designs, new materials, better workmanship. Well-informed people always read the advertisements to keep posted.

Reading the advertisements is an investment that pays big returns
